Russia and Here Flying Too Low Germany's Buying Panic No Cat, Then Beware

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

Professor Tugwell, of the "highbrow brigade," tells senators who hesitate to confirm him as under secretary of agriculture that he believes in the Constitution and that it should be "altered only by orderly process to meet the exigencies of changing economic conditions."

A considerable majority of Americans are in favor of that "orderly process" and will see to it.

Professor Tugwell is alleged to have expressed the opinion that "the peasants of Russia, under a so-called proletarian government, are relatively better off than the farmers in the United States."

In what consists being "better off"? For every bathtub owned by peasants in Russia a hundred are owned by farmers in the United States. For every automobile owned by peasants in Russia there are probably a thousand owned by farmers in the United States.

An airplane of the "American Airlines" was wrecked and burned in the Catskill mountains, with all on board, seven four passengers, two pilots and the "stewardess" dead.

The government is careful about inspecting planes and testing pilots. Is it sufficiently careful about stipulating the height at which passenger-carrying planes must fly and what pilots must do in dangerous weather?

A sea-going vessel sails in "deep water." It does not skim along the tops of rocks near the surface. There is plenty of "deep water" in the atmosphere above this earth. Is there any reason why airplanes should skim as near as possible to the surface of the earth frequently colliding with mountainsides and hills?

Germany, financially frightened, has a "buying panic." Because it is not certain how much German money will be worth, in a little while, Germans are buying goods and storing them away.

You may have here some similar "buying panic," because, as a matter of necessity, we are going to have inflation here, whether we have it sensibly, by issuing money that doesn't have to pay interest, or continue inflating idiotically by issuing bonds, billions at a time, which represent inflation plus interest.

Here the buying panic will take the form of buying real properties, stocks which represent permanent values, and especially well located real estate, that will be valuable as long as anything in the United States remains valuable, and bring a good return on any kind of money that happens to be current.

If you have any good real estate, don't be in a hurry to sell.

Sailors with friends on the big ship Leviathan are worried because that boat went to sea last Saturday with no cat on board. To sail without a cat, according to sailors, is "the worst possible luck."

And, most curiously, the same sailors consider it bad luck to sail with a clergyman on board. Why the presence of a clergyman or the absence of a cat should be dangerous to a ship is a puzzle.

Dr. James Bryant Conant.

Boy Freed in Fatal Andover Car Crash

Lawrence, June 12—Manslaughter and driving to endanger charges were dismissed in Lawrence district court today at arraignment of Thomas R. Burrell, 19, Fall River student at Phillips Andover academy.

Burrell drove a car in which John Adams Kingsbury, Jr., 18, of Yonkers, N. Y., was killed on May 28, when Burrell's automobile crashed into a tree at Ballardvale when returning from a fraternity initiation.

The car was going only 23 miles an hour according to William S. Littlefield, Upper Montclair, N. J., an Andover student. Those injured were riding on the running board.

Roosevelt Signs New Air Mail Bill

Washington, June 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt today signed the administration's bill for regulating airmail transportation. Signature climaxed months of investigation and controversy over handling air mail under this and former administrations.

Among other things, the bill eliminates some practices denounced by Postmaster General Farley when he cancelled air mail contracts and authorizes the postmaster general to award one-year contracts by competitive bidding.

Doris Duke Bomb Plot Bared

By Associated Press

Newark, N. J., June 12—An alleged threat to bomb the Somerville estate of Doris Duke, the tobacco heiress who has been called the world's richest girl, was revealed today in a Federal Grand Jury indictment returned against Thomas Layden, 17-year old Newark youth.

Layden was arrested in an extortion attempt aimed at Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey. McCarter was told to leave $3,000, or the Newark terminal would be blown up.

That Layden had allegedly demanded a similar amount of money from Miss Duke under threats of bombing her country home at Somerville was not known until the indictment was returned.

Attached to the indictment was a copy of the letter to Miss Duke. It read:

"I just wanted to tell you that I planted a bomb on your estate. It will go off at 3 p. m., Saturday, May 26, unless you pay $3000. Be there at 1 or 2 o'clock.

LEARY FINDS FATAL DIET MALADY

Foods That Cause Fat to Clog Blood Are Listed by Doctor

Cleveland, June 12 (—Substances found in several foods which man considers essential form a fatty growth inside the arteries of many persons which eventually causes death, Dr. Timothy Leary of Boston today told the American Heart Association, in session here in conjunction with the convention of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Leary's discovery, hailed as an outstanding contribution to the field of medicine, came out of his experience as medical examiner.

His autopsies on persons who died suddenly frequently showed that this fatty growth was the cause and he began a series of experiments, covering five years, to ascertain the source.

He found that man is the only animal in which this condition ap-

NAVY PAPERS, EXPLOSIVES ON PLANE

Chemists Called for Inquest; Details of Documents Guarded

BULLETIN

Livingston Manor, June 12—A second bag carried by W. B. Bader, chemical engineer, of Buffalo, on the wrecked airliner has disappeared, according to Coroner Burke. There was no trace left of the mysterious bag, he said, when he revealed that officials of Bader's company were "very anxious to get hold of it."

Livingston Manor, N. Y., June 12 — The giant airplane which carried seven persons to their deaths on the rugged side of Mongaup mountain near here, carried valuable naval papers, which were salvaged.

Dr. V. G. Burke, Sullivan county coroner, disclosed the fact that the papers were aboard as he went ahead today with preparations for an inquest to determine the cause of the disaster.

PAPERS KEPT SECRET

He said the papers had been in possession of William Bader, Buffalo, one of the victims of the crash. He said they had been salvaged and were now in his possession.

Dr. Burke said strong representations were made today by T. H. Bennett, of the Sennet-Solvay company, employers of Bader, for possession of the papers, but that the request had been refused pending the completion of the inquest late tomorrow.

Burke said Bennett told him the papers were valuable naval documents for which the company was responsible, and Bennett asked the coroner to turn them over to him at once.

"He inferred," Dr. Burke said, "that the papers were valuable secret documents of the Navy Department."

PROPERTY OF NAVY

Then Dr. Burke said Bennett told him the papers included secret formulas, some the property of the Navy Department and some the property of the company. There were 30 or 40 such papers, Dr.

Seven hundred women are to be employed as teachers at city of Boston playgrounds this summer, Nathan J. Young, director of physical education in the public schools, announced today.

Selection of women for the positions is already being made and the 700 are expected to be chosen before the playgrounds open for summer. The summer playground work is used as a means of furnishing employment for teachers who have not obtained much work during the regular school year.

First choice is to be given to women who have earned $200 or less during the school year, the selection to be based on the women on the list prior to 1932.

POLICE GRILL MAN SEIZED IN NASHUA WOODS

Fits Description of a Wayfarer Who Told of Two Killings

By JAMES J. SMITH
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Lowell, June 12—In a woodland retreat at Nashua, N. H., police today arrested a man answering the description of the wayfarer who, three hours before discovery of the Canotette killings, told a Lowell resident the couple had been murdered.

As the wayfarer made his announcement to a chance acquaintance, the bullet-pierced bodies of Paul Canotette, guitar, radio expert and chicken farmer, and his pretty wife, Alice, lay back of their home, to be found later by Canotte's stepfather.

HIS ANSWERS VAGUE

How the wanderer knew of the double slaying of the former Somerville and Cambridge couple was the question to which police sought an answer as they began questioning him.

His first answers to questions were vague, however, police said. He told them he believed he was a native of Nashua and that he thought he worked in Lynn last winter, but was not certain when.

In taking leave of the Lowell resident after disclosing the fact that the man and woman had been slain, the wayfarer asked directions to Nashua.

When found today in the woods at Sandy pond on the outskirts of Nashua, he said he had slept in the open last night, but denied he had made any effort at concealment.

BOY INDICTED IN LOOP DEATH

Francis T. Hart, 19, driver of the car in the "loop" killing of Patrolman James T. Malloy last week was indicted by the Suffolk County grand jury today for second-degree murder.

Hart was also charged with leaving the scene of an accident, operating negligently and operating after the suspension of his license.

James D. Taylor, 18, of Charlestown was indicted with Hart on another charge of larceny and unlawful use of an automobile. He was riding in the car with Hart, according to police, when Malloy was killed.

Mrs. Brighton visited the Dedham jail today and spent an hour chatting with her daughter.

8-Cent Milk Calls Swamp New York

New York, June 12 (AP)—The city, continuing its role of milk-man to the needy, was swamped again today with customers. Twenty-six milk stations in Manhattan and the Bronx alone sold thousands of quarts at eight cents, five cents below the market price, and many applicants had to be turned away. The demand was greater today than yesterday.

TUGWELL WINS BOARD O. K.

By Associated Press

Washington, June 12—The Senate agriculture committee today approved Rexford G. Tugwell as under-secretary of agriculture by a decisive margin.

The first senator to leave the executive session of the committee said he believed the vote was 16 to 2 with only Chairman Smith (D.-S. C.) and Senator Hatfield (R.-Va.) voting against Tugwell.

The committee, during a four-hour session yesterday, received objections to Tugwell's advancement from assistant secretary. He was opposed by Smith, Senator Byrd (D.-Va.) and others.

DARROW'S NEW REPORT HITS PRICE FIXING IN 2 INDUSTRIES

BOARD SAYS LARGE FIRMS WRITE OWN N. R. A. CODES

Boosting Is Charged Under Cement, Lumber Blue Eagles; Johnson Again Draws Ire of Reviewers

By International News Service

Washington, June 12—Bombardment of the National Recovery Act by the Review Board under the chairmanship of Clarence Darrow, continued today, as the contents of the second report became known.

The new report, covering 14 codes, finds evidence of price fixing and price boosting in the cement and lumber industries.

The code governing the petroleum industry is also attacked in the report, although the criticism is limited to the code, while Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes is praised for his administration of the petroleum industry code.

ICKES PRAISED

While Ickes is praised in the report, which the White House expects to make public at the end of this week, Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson again draws the ire of the group.

"In our judgment," the report states, "the rule of the military commander is totally unsuited to the genius, habit, traditions or phychology of the American people and wholly ineffectual in meeting the present national crisis."

Besides lumber, cement and oil the report includes its findings on such codes as the general retail trade and the retail food and grocery business.

WRITE OWN CODES

It continues the trend of its first report when the review of the eight codes under study found monopolistic tendencies under the "Blue Eagle." Besides pointing out the monopolistic trend of the recovery administration, the second report finds in particular that seemingly innocent discount and quality provisions in several codes actually create a situation oppressive to small enterprise and unfairly advantageous to big industrial units.

The second report also finds that trade associations, having as members many large firms, have written the codes to their own advantage, and have then had their boards changed into code authorities to administer the codes.

An accompanying letter transmitting the report to the White House also points out that the NRA's recent price policy declaration has been "a complete verification of the criticism we made in the first report of existing evils in certain codes."

"It is most encouraging to know that the defects we pointed out then are to have prompt and efficient attention," the letter declares.

"Millions of our distressed fellow citizens will be cheered with new hope to learn from this price policy bulletin that the complaints we recorded of long delays in the hearing of grievances are now to be prevented, that the abuses of price fixing are to be cured, that inequalities in conditions under the codes are to be diminished."

The second report is signed by all present members of the board except W. O. Thompson, the reputed author of the first supplementary report which drew the attacks of Johnson and Recovery Counsel Donald Richberg. Thompson refused to give his reason for refusing his signature to the second report.

The board intends to dissolve on July 1, after it submits a third report.

SHIP STEWARD FOUND DEAD

The body of Henry B. Taylor, 31, steward aboard the yacht Wachusett, owned by Henry Fisk, millionaire tire manufacturer, was found in Dorchester Bay near Lawley's shipyard.

Taylor, who made his home at 1075 Boylston street, Back Bay, while the yacht was tied up at the shipyard, disappeared last Tuesday. At that time he left for the city to pay several bills, according to Captain J. Emery Powers, a friend.

A brief examination of the body showed no evidence of foul play, but police are awaiting the medical examiner's report before closing the case.

Police investigation showed he paid the bills, amounting to about $150. There were no marks of violence.

Woman Rescued from Park Lake

Mary Garvey, 25, of East Cottage street, Dorchester, jumped into the lake at Prospect park, Brooklyn, in what police say was an attempted suicide, and was rescued by Frank Freedman, 22, of Brooklyn, according to New York police.

She was taken to Kings County Hospital and questioned by police.

JAPAN SERVES ARMED THREAT ON CHINA

Missing Envoy May Be Hunted by Troops, Edict Asserts

By The Associated Press

Shanghai, June 12—The Japanese government officially informed China today that it would hold China responsible for the disappearance of Eimei Kuramoto, Japanese vice consul at Nanking, and reserved the right to take whatever action in the matter Japan considers appropriate.

Chinese authorities there have offered $10,000 Mexican ($3300 U. S.) for information as to Kuramoto's whereabouts.

Yorikichi Suma, Japanese consul-general, informed the Chinese foreign office Japan may demand indemnity.

By Associated Press

Tokio, June 12—Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, with the Cabinet's approval, today informed China a "very serious affair" menaces Sino-Japanese relations, referring to the unexplained disappearance at Nanking of Eimei Kuramoto, Japanese vice-consul there.

A foreign office spokesman denied any threat of military action but vernacular newspapers said if Kuramoto were not found or satisfaction obtained within three days, battleships might be landed from three Japanese warships already off Nanking.

NORMA'S JURY PANEL DRAWN IN DEDHAM

MESSINGER'S STORY

Norma is charged in an indictment as accessory after the crime. Her trial is scheduled to start a week from tomorrow.

Testimony of Saul Messinger of New York, boyhood chum of her husband, will be the principal weapon of the state against the pretty daughter of a Natick minister. Messinger testified against his former chum at the trial that ended last week.

Frances Millen appealed to Sheriff Samuel H. Capen to relent in his order allowing members of the family only one visit a week. The sheriff then ordered visits to be increased to two a week.

Miss Millen was allowed to visit Murton and Irving and spent half an hour talking with each of them.

SCHARTON IN PROBE

Attorneys Scharton and Palais, counsel for Faber, are investigating activities which transpired around the courthouse while the jury deliberated. The results of this investigation are expected to be used as a basis for a motion for a new trial.

Attorney George Stanley Harvey, counsel for the Millens, dropped all work and left today for a vacation in Maine.

Motions for a new trial had not been filed at the clerk's office. According to the law, the motions must be granted or denied before the defendants are sentenced.

The length of time which expires between the sentence and the time the three defendants die in the electric chair is merely a matter of conjecture, court officials and attorneys said today.

APPEAL TO U. S.

Appeals must be filed with the clerk of the Massachusetts Supreme Court within 20 days after sentence is pronounced. The Supreme Court has suspended sessions for the summer.

A delay of several months might be entailed if Attorney Harvey pursues his appeal to the United States Supreme Court on denials of a writ of habeas corpus and a motion for halting the Millen-Faber trial pending disposition of proceedings in federal court.

In the midst of the trial, Harvey went before the U. S. Supreme Court, seeking a mandate ordering the Dedham trial halted until the federal court matter had been disposed of, but this petition was denied.

Praising them for "careful and diligent work" leading to the arrest and conviction of Abraham Faber and the Millen brothers for the Needham Trust Bank holdup and murders, Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman today presented Sergeant Charles F. Eldridge of Divion 16 and Patrolman Edward A. McDonnell of Division 9, with honor medals.

The presentation took place in the commissioner's office. Present were Superintendent Martin H. King, Deputy Superintendents John M. Anderson, James McDevitt and William Livingstone, and Captains Thomas S. J. Kavanagh and Perley S. Skillings.

Millens' Doom May Go to Fall

Formal passing of the death sentence of Murton, and Irving Millen, and Abe Faber, convicted in the Needham Trust Co., killings, may not take place until the fall.

Although Judge Brown announced at the time of the conviction that sentence would be passed tomorrow, it may be deferred until the Massachusetts Supreme Court passes on appeals to be made by the trio.

Third Strike Bombing

San Juan, Puerto Rico, June 12 (AP)—A bomb was exploded on the balcony of the home of Albert E. Lee, father of Waldemar Lee, traffic superintendent of the Puerto Rico Telephone Company. It was the third bombing since the telephone strike here began.

Mary Brian and Leah Ray Mourn Air Line Victims

Buffalo, June 12—Mary Brian, motion picture star, whose name has been linked with Harold Pinsley, one of the victims of the New York airliner crash, was reported "carrying on" here today, although on the verge of collapse.

Only yesterday, Leah Ray, stage and radio singr, and fiancee of the youthful victim, was said to be carrying on the tradition of the theatrical world in Detroit. She went through her usual performance, although she was said to be heartbroken over the tragedy.

Pinsley was Miss Brian's business manager and, it was revealed today, was on his way here to meet her when he met death in the plane tragedy.

Before taking off from Newark airport Saturday, Pinsley had jokingly denied the truth of a columnist's report linking his name romantically with that of Miss Brian. The latter remained awake all night waiting for word of Pinsley when the fact the plane was missing became known.

When the report of his death was confirmed Miss Brian seemed to be on the verg of collapse. After the first shock of the news, she rallied quickly and "went on with the show," according to the traditions of the stage.

NAVY PAPERS ON PLANE

By RAYMOND C. BAKER

Burke said, and Bennett was very anxious to obtain possession of them.

The coroner declined to say whether he intended to make the papers public at the inquest, stating that he had the matter under advisement.

CHEMISTS TO BE PRESENT

Three bottles of chemicals, carried by Bader and found intact in the wreckage, also were in the possession of the coroner. Bennett also asked for possession of these, and likewise was refused.

CHEMISTS TO BE PRESENT

Dr. Burke said Bennett volunteered to have chemists present at the inquest tomorrow at liberty to identify the contents of the bottles, which were the property of the Semet-Solvay Company.

Meanwhile, preparations went forward at Liberty for sending to their homes the bodies of the victims.

Bader's body was claimed by his father, William Bader, of Buffalo, who arrived in Liberty early today.

The body of William Cass, also of Buffalo, was identified by a dentist's chart of his teeth sent from Buffalo and used by a Liberty dentist to make the identification. It was claimed for the family by W. F. Whaley of Buffalo.

ONE BODY NOT BURNED

The body of the third Buffalo man, Harold Coppins, was not badly burned. It was identified by Lawrence Thebaud of Park lane, Buffalo, who claimed it for his family.

The body of the fourth passenger, Harry Pinsley of New York, was brought here and sent to a Brooklyn, N. Y., undertaking establishment to be prepared for shipment to the home of his parents in Chicago.

The other dead were the crew of the plane, Clyde Holbrook, pilot; John Barron, Jr., co-pilot, and Miss Ada Buckeby, stewardess.

EXPLOSIVES DISCOVERED

Discovery of a bag containing explosives in the twisted and flame-blackened wreckage was revealed by Coroner Burke.

Burke said three bottles in a bag on the plane contained picric acid, leading to the belief that an explosion might have occurred in the cabin of the giant ship before it crashed, burst into flames, and scorched its way for 100 yards through the brush-encrusted mountainside.

Coroner Burke said:

"I am not prepared to say that these explosives caused the crash. I merely mention their presence, and that of certain literature as chemical research, as a factor in the searching inquiry we will make."

The chemicals were a bottle of brownish crystals labeled "O B Picrate," and a bottle of red crystals, unlabeled.

CHEMISTS TO BE CALLED

Coroner Burke said the inquest will be held in the office of District Attorney William Beckleman of Sullivan County and will center to a large extent on the testimony of chemists of the Semet-Solvay Co. of Syracuse, by whom Bader was employed. The coroner said they will be questioned in detail concerning the chemicals found in Bader's luggage.

Officials of the American Air Lines, owner of the wrecked plane, also will testify.

U. S. AGENTS ON SCENE

With two representatives on the scene, the U. S Department of Commerce began an investigation into the cause of the catastrophe. The inspectors were Robert Hasen and George Losmow. Neither would comment until he had a chance to inspect the wreckage.

Exclusive of the explosion theory, there were conflicting opinions on the disaster. Theodore A. Schmidt, eastern manager of the line, tentatively expressed the belief that the plane had hit a sudden rain squall, and had crashed while flying blind.

Edward B. Kluber, of Long Island City, N. Y., said, however, that while driving in the neighborhood he had seen the giant transport flying erratically, apparently in trouble, and there was no rain at that time.

TORN DIARY OF GIRL STUDIED AFTER PLUNGE IS FOILED

HOSTESS' FALL BROKEN BY A PASSERBY

Police Reveal Pages Ripped From Book Tell of Parties

Cambridge police pored over the descriptions of Boston night life in the diary of Lorraine Nixon, 20, of Pearl street, today as the young woman was committed to the Boston Psychopathic Hospital for observation.

She attempted to plunge to her death from the porch of her home early today but her purpose was foiled when her body struck a pedestrian, Joseph Gualteri, of Chestnut street, Cambridge.

The young woman suffered only a bruised hip and was later arraigned in East Cambridge court on a technical charge of disturbing the peace. Gualteri is at Cambridge Relief station with a possible fracture of the left leg.

DIARY TORN

Police said she tore her diary before she plunged. Pages since February had been torn from the book.

The diary, for the preceding months, recounted parties which she had attended at Boston hotels and names of men she met there. She also mentioned the names of men from who she had received gifts.

According to the diary, police said, she attended parties on an average of three times a week. Mysterious crosses were placed after some names and after accounts of some parties.

Other parties were characterized as "a very nice time," with two wavy lines over the word "very."

The diary also contained accounts of moving pictures she had seen. Her landlady told police the young woman was an ardent picture fan.

DESPONDENT SHE SAYS

Police say the young woman told them she was despondent because she had lost her position in a Boston night club several weeks ago and had been unable to find employment.

QUADRUPLETS GAINING ON NEW DIET

'All Yell Like Dickens,' Doctor Says; Praises Their Condition

By Associated Press

Sac City Ia., June 12—The Wycoff quadruplets are thriving today on a diet of corn syrup and milk in makeshift incubators improvised by the attending physician.

Dr. G. H. Swearingen, who delivered the four tiny infants, said the babies are showing marked improvement and that he would probably weigh them during the day. They have not been weighed since shortly after birth Saturday.

The ration of the babies has been increased to an average of about two teaspoonfuls of the corn syrup-milk mixture every hour.

Gifts of food and clothing which will enable the father, Lawrence, to stretch his $16-a-week salary to provide care for his children poured in upon the Sac County highway worker. Arrival of the quadruplets Saturday increased the number of his children to nine.

The doctor said he was confident all would grow to normal babyhood.

"All four can yell like the dickens," the doctor said, "and anyone knows that's a good sign."

The mother, 30, who has borne nine children in eight years, smiled happily from her bed and murmured thanks to the friends who brought food and clothing.

Corbell, Ont., June 12—The tiny Dionne quintuplets, now on their third week in the world, were reported today to be progressing satisfactorily.

Dr. A. R. Dafoe, the country physician who has attended the five sisters since their birth 13 days ago, refused to become alarmed when it was revealed four of them have lost weight since Sunday.

"I can safely say they are much stronger than a week ago," he said.

Hollis, Okla., June 12—Mary, Mona, Leota and Roberta Keys, only quadruplets in recent history known to have reached maturity, sent greetings today to the Dionne quintuplets in Canada.

Not Quite Quintuplets, But Still Four at a Time Count

There's nothing hellitling about quadruplets, even if the Dionne quintuplets still are in the spotlight. Mrs. Lawrence Wycoff, shown with her three daughters and a new son, is smiling happily except when her babies voice their protests in no uncertain manner. Doctors say all four will grow up to be normal children. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

2 WOMEN HELD IN $40,000 FOR BANK FRAUD

Two women, charged with having conspired to steal $14,000 from 14 savings banks in an alleged insurance fraud, were held in $20,000 each for the grand jury today after a hearing in municipal court.

Mrs. Teresa Di Paolo of Bremen street, East Boston, and Mrs. Teresa Poto of Elmwood street Somerville, are alleged to have had a man take an insurance physical examination in the name of Michael Di Paolo, husband of Teresa, and to have obtained the insurance on Di Paolo two months before he died.

Police Inspector Frank Haggerty, testified he was told on May 19 by Mrs. De Paolo that Mrs. Poto persuaded her to insure DePaolo, took her to the Union Savings Bank, arranged for the insurance and paid the premiums.

She named one Leonardo Iannello, a man much larger than De Paolo, as having taken the physical examination.

Los Angeles, June 12—Because, she says, "Slim" Summerville carries his romancing from the screen into real life, his wife sought a $300 monthly allowance in a separate maintenance action today.

The film comedian "visited other women in Mexico and mountain resorts," Gertrude M. Summerville charged in her action. He gave "cash gifts totaling $2000 to an unnamed Hollywood woman," the wife said.

She added that the actor, whose real name is George J. Summerville, is capable of earning $100,000 a year and their community property is worth $100,000. The couple were married Nov. 21, 1927, and separated several months ago.

DROUTH FUND HITS SNAG

By International News Service

Washington, June 12—President Roosevelt's legislative program for the dying Congress struck a snag today when stiff opposition developed in the Senate appropriations committee against his request for a $525,000,000 drought relief fund.

On top of this, the House began debate on a sharply modified housing bill, while the Senate sidetracked the Wagner labor dispute bill. Both of these measures were on the President's "must" program.

The President's new silver bill meanwhile was sent back to the House, after the Senate passed it by a vote of 55 to 24.

Death of Maggie Cline Recalls Noted Songs

New York, June 12—Maggie Cline, who thrilled variety hall audiences in the nineties with her rendition of "Throw Him Down McCloskey," died at her home at Fair Haven, N. J., yesterday. She was 77 years old, but had been in good health until four months ago when she suffered a stroke.

Seventy-five thousand times, by her own statement, did Maggie Cline—in private life Mrs. John F. Ryan—sing the praises of the wild McCloskey and his historic fight. It was the wow song of its day, but as Maggie said years after her retirement in 1917, she "could never live it down."

J. W. Kelly wrote the piece and offered it to Maggie in 1890 for $2. She gave him five and told him not to forget the boys in the back room. She was playing at Tony Pastor's Philadelphia theater at the time.

HER FAMOUS SONG

Following were the words and chorus of her famous song:

I

"'Twas down at Dan McDevitt's at the corner of the street,
There was to be a prizefight, and the parties were to meet.
To make all the arrangements, see everything was right;
McCloskey and a naygur were to have a finish fight.*
The rules were London prizering, McCloskey said he'd try
To lick the naygur in a punch or in the ring he'd die.
The odds were on McCloskey, although the bets were small—
On McCloskey ten to one, on naygur none at all.

Chorus

"'Throw him down, McCloskey,' was to be the battle cry,
Throw him down McCloskey; you can lick him if you try.
And future generations with wonder and delight
Will read in history's pages of the great McCloskey fight.

II

"The fighters were to start in at a quarter after eight;
But the naygur didn't show up and the hour was getting late
At last he sent a messenger who then went on to say
The Irish crowd would jump him and he wouldn't get fair play.
Then up steps Pete McCracken and said that he would fight a Stand up or rough-and-tumble, if McCloskey wouldn't like.
McCloskey said, 'I'll go you,' the seconds took their place
And the fighters started in to decorate each other's face.

III

"They fit like two hyenas, till the forty-seventh round,
They scattered enough blood about, be gosh, to paint the town,
Till McCloskey got a mouthful of poor McCracken's jowl;
McCracken hollered murder; and his seconds hollered foul.
The friends of both the fighters that instant did begin
To fight and ate each other the whole party started in
You couldn't tell the difference 'twixt the fighters if you tried—
McCloskey lost his upper lip, McCracken lost his eye."

* Third Avenue for Negro.

NATIVE OF HAVERHILL

The original song was named McGinty, but there was another McGinty in vogue at the time, one who went down to the bottom of the sea. So Maggie dropped and substituted for it the name of McCloskey, a fine, upstanding Irishman of Haverhill, Mass., her home town.

Maggie was born in Haverhill, one of six children of a shoe factory foreman. She went to work in the factory, too, but ran away at the age of 16 and got a job at the Palace Vaudeville Theater in Boston.

Fifty-two years ago, the late Tony Pastor put her on the bill of the Fourteenth Street Theater—a tall, muscular, gray-eyed Irish girl. She grew in popularity slowly but steadily until the McCloskey song. After that she was famous.

James Huneker, then newspaper music critic, christened her the "Bowery Brunhilde" and said she ranked with Bernhardt and Padrewski.

She was at her heyday in the time of Lillian Russell, May Irwin, Barry and Fay, Pat Rooney and others now forgotten. Her last appearance was at the Palace Theatre in 1917, when she sang "Throw Him Down, McCloskey."

Then she retired to Red Bank to enjoy rural life with her husband, John Ryan, whom she married in 1887.

WAYFARER WHO KNEW ABOUT 2 KILLINGS HELD

man who settled on a chicken farm for his health and the wife who gave up pleasures and conveniences to aid him in his fight.

WHAT DETECTIVES FIND

Thus far in the investigation of the double slaying, the detectives have checked the following points:

Caouette and his wife were both slain in mid-forenoon on June 8, perhaps within two minutes of each other.

Caouette was shot first, taken by surprise, as indicated by the fact that all three bullets entered his body from the rear.

He was shot at close range, two bullets piercing his upper back near together and angling in to strike the heart; the third bullet being fired into the head.

Caouette was killed as he alighted from his car, which he had driven on to his property to a point behind the house, halfway to the chicken house.

FOILED SOME DARK DEED?

In all probability, Caouette arrived in time to surprise an acquaintance engaged in some suspicious activity, and the acquaintance killed to keep Caouette silent. (A tentative theory.)

Mrs. Caouette, hearing the shots, came running out from behind a low building back of the chicken house, where she had been hanging out clothes.

The killer, already in flight for the woods back of the small farm, met her, was recognized, and, at close range, fired one shot into her head from the front.

Then the killer, realising that Caouette's body lay where it could be seen from the highway, and realizing that quick discovery would lessen his time for flight, raced back, dragged Caouette's body into the chicken coop, out of sight, then resumed his flight through the woods.

WIPED PRINTS AWAY

Snatching up a diaper in his flight, the killer may have carried it into the woods to wipe fingerprints from the murder gun before casting it among the trees. The diaper was found in the woods half a mile from the murder scene.

Four suspects, two of them describing themselves as tramps and one taken into custody while looking for work not far from the murder scene, were released today after questioning, during which they convinced police that they knew nothing about the crimes.

A short time later, acting on one of the secret clues police are believed to have, inspectors Patrick Bagley and Patrick B. Clark made a second trip to Nashua, N. H.

Yesterday Inspector Clark went to Nashua and brought back to Lowell a former country club employe. The man was released, however.

MAN KNEW OF TRAGEDY

Efforts of a number of the investigators were directed today to tracing a wayfarer declared to have evidence of knowledge of the double slaying shortly after 4 p. m. Friday, more than three hours before the crimes were discovered officially.

According to the wayfarer story told police by the Lowell man, whom they declare is trustworthy, the man met the wayfarer in Lakeview avenue, near Campaw street, about six miles from the center of Lowell in the direction of New Hampshire.

"Good morning," greeted the shabbily-dressed stranger, although it was afternoon, "what do you think about the murders?"

"Who was killed?" the Lowell man asked.

"A man and a woman."

"Where?"

BEFORE BODIES FOUND

"Over there," said the stranger, waving vaguely across the Merrimack River, toward where the Caouette home is located.

"How do you know?" asked the Lowell man.

"I read it on the bulletin board. There were a man and a woman shot and there was a baby in a crib."

To Lowell residents, "the bulletin board," indicated the bulletin board of the Lowell Sun, a newspaper downtown, but at that time the Sun had no knowledge of the killings and the bodies were not discovered by Caouette's stepfather, Dr. James A. Manning, Boston chiropodist, until about 7:30 p. m.

HEADS FOR NASHUA

The stranger then asked directions to Nashua, the Lowell informant said, and resumed his plodding along the road.

He was described as 25 or 37 years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing from 160 to 170 pounds and wearing dark, shabby, dusty clothes, old shoes and a soft hat.

He carried an overcoat or topcoat over his arm and had a length of rope tied about his waist.

As a simple double funeral service was being conducted for the victims in the Prospect Hill Congregational Church, Somerville, a state trooper recalled that on the date of the killing he had been prevented from making his usual daily call at the Caouette farm by a mysterious telephone call taking him to another part of his route.

There were no pallbearers at the services in the church, of which the wife had been a lifelong member, nor was there singing. The Rev. Walter B. Jerge, her pastor, recited prayers for the dead in the presence of friends and relatives, and then the bodies were taken to Cambridge cemetery for burial.

MADE DAILY STOPS

Last Friday, the day of the murders, Motorcycle Officer Louis J. Turner had to abandon his usual trip to the house after a mystery telephone call to investigate a minor complaint on another part of his route, he told superiors.

Turner said he made daily stops at the house because of its isolated location on the Tyngsboro line and his anxiety to see that nothing befell the couple and baby daughter, who were forced to move there for Caouette's health.

The new turn was discovered as State Detectives Edward Sherlock and Edward O'Neill took charge of the murder investigation with Assistant District Attorneys Paul R. Foley and William G. Andrew of Middlesex County.

MOVEMENTS KNOWN, BELIEF

They said they planned to investigate the complaint that Turner said drew him away from the Caouette home and to question Turner on any fears the couple might have had for their lives. They seemed convinced that someone, who was familiar with Turner's visits might, prove the slayer.

Other investigators were ordered by Police Superintendent Hugh Downey and Deputy Superintendent Michael H. Winn to bring in three Lowell persons and three friends of the couple from Somerville for questioning.

Where Lowell Fiend Slayer Snuffed Out Two Lives

Sketch by Boston Evening American staff artist shows scene of brutal and puzzling murder of the former Somerville couple, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Caouette, on their Lowell farm. Police hint at secret clues pointing to the fiendish slayer. Two discharged cartridges were found near the bodies. These may be from a stolen police pistol.

Sixth Man Held in Cheese Factory Counterfeit Plot

Joseph Pimental of Lynde street, Somerville, the sixth man arrested in connection with counterfeiting among employes of the cheese factory, where police and secret service agents found bombs and loaded guns recently, was held in $10,000 today by U. S. Commissioned Edwin C. Jenney.

Secret Service Agent McCormack said he was told the bombs were used to blow holes in the cheese and bullets to decorate the edges.

This information, he said, was given to him by Vincent Bruzzese, boss of the factory.

The factory is opposite Police Station 1, North End. Pimentel is employed there as a butter and cheese maker. Last Friday he had his car cleaned at an auto park in Hanover street, and allegedly gave George Seward, the proprietor, a counterfeit $10 bill.

ELY FORECASTS 3 BALLOTS AT WORCESTER

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Governor Ely expects to see a Democratic candidate for governor nominated on the third ballot at the Worcester convention on Thursday.

The governor conferred with General Charles H. Cole today for 10 minutes. Asked if they had talked politics, the governor said:

"We were discussing an elevated bill."

"Is General Cole in the fight?" he was asked.

"Yes, he replied.

"Is Judge John Burns?" "Yes, they are all in," the governor said with a laugh.

The governor will attend the convention.

"That is going to be a good part," he said. "You don't think I'm going to miss it, do you?"

Told that reports of drafting him for a third term were being revived, he commented:

"Nothing doing."

General Cole told reporters:

"I am not a candidate but if the convention saw fit to nominate me it would be difficult to refuse."

FARLEY TO BROADCAST

The convention in Worcester has taken on national significance.

Postmaster-General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, as keynoter of the all-before banquet tomorrow night in the Bancroft Hotel, will speak over a country-wide hookup.

Farley's address will go on the air from 11 to 11:30 p. m.

Tickets for the "love-fest" preceding the holding of the convention on Thursday in the Worcester municipal memorial auditorium, are at a premium, indicating the intense interest in the affair by the rank and file of the party.

HEARING ON PLATFORM

Tonight at the Hotel Bellevue, the temporary resolutions committee of the convention, made up of 40 delegates designated by the delegate groups in each of the senatorial districts, will hold a second public hearing on proposed planks for the party platform to be adopted by the convention.

Former Mayor William L. Gleason of Brockton, has been chosen chairman of this committee and it is expected that the selection will be accepted by the convention.

Proposals for planks already submitted call for an investigation of the cost of gas and electricity to the consumer by Charles T. Brooks of South Boston; an anti-lynching law by the Colored Mens' Democratic Club of Cambridge, a study of the judicial system of the state by the Boston Bar Association, development of the rivers and harbors of the state to insure more maritime trade by Luke A. Manning of Arlington, and the acquisition of additional state land for forest and recreation purposes by Mrs. Helen G. Talbot of Cummington.

SLATES OF NOMINEES

For the nomination of lieutenant governor those mentioned are Mayor Joseph L. Hurley of Fall River, Representative William H. Doyle of Malden, Arthur T. Lyman of Westwood, Mayor John C. Mahoney of Worcester, Chairman Maurice Tobin of the Boston School committee former Boston City Councillor Francis E. Kelley and Congressman William J. Granfield of Longmeadow.

Others mentioned are Joseph Santosuosso of Boston and Bernard Cleary of Taunton for secretary of state; Raymond Sullivan of Brighton, Martin Hall of Natick and Leo J. Hallovan of Quincy for attorney general; and Deputy State Auditor Thomas Buckley of Abington for auditor.

While there is sentiment for the naming of a woman on the state ticket, the strategy, according to the leaders, will be to recognize her for a position other than auditor. The Republicans have endorsed Mrs. Elizabeth W. Pigeon for auditor. Endorsement by the Democrats of a woman, it is being suggested, should make for the post of state secretary.

BACK BAY MAN SEIZED FOR R. I.

Victor E. DiMatteo, 42, of Queensbury street, Back Bay, today faced a police lineup at Providence following his arrest on suspicion of yesterday's holdup of a market in which three gunmen escaped with $1874.

DiMatteo was arrested after a short chase in Back Bay, after his photograph had been picked from the Providence rogue's gallery by David Cohen, 22-year-old cashier who was held up.

Providence police took him to Providence, after DiMatteo denied he had taken part in the holdup and waived extradition. They said three other men were held for questioning at Providence, but declined to name them.

Keeping Cool Prevents Show Stampede

GERTRUDE LAWRENCE DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., made a speech and Gertrude Lawrence held a crowd with her acting when a stampede threatened in a Birmingham theater last night. A match case blaze was the cause of the near riot. This is a recent picture of the couple taken in England. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

GERTRUDE AND DOUG HEROES

By International News Service

London, June 12—The calm courage of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and the well-known ability of Gertrude Lawrence to command an audience, prevented a panic at the Theater Royal in Birmingham which might have cost lives, the London Daily Herald reports today.

Last night, smoke started to drift across the footlights while Miss Lawrence and Nicholas Hannen were playing a scene on the stage.

Miss Lawrence held the crowd by going right on playing. When cries of "fire" started people moving towards the exists, Fairbanks made a speech explaining that the fire was merely a celluloid cigarette case which had burst into flames.

MISS SNOWDEN, UNKISSED BY PRINCE, WEDS

New York, June 12—Janet Snowden, the poor little rich girl who just won't listen to mama, has acquired a husband twice her age to take the place of the young Italian prince she divorced a couple of months ago after a five-day kineless marriage.

Mama, who is Mrs. Walter Sherman Davidson (widow of James M. Snowden, oil magnate, made the announcement herself yesterday at Newport, R. I.

MARRIED IN MEXICO

But the marriage didn't take place in the socially proper atmosphere of Newport. It was celebrated, mama said, at Ensenada, Mexico. It happened last Friday. And if mama knew any more about it, she kept the rest to herself.

Janet Snowdon

Janet's choice to replace the unresponsive Don Francesco Caravita, Prince di Sirignano, is William Sherman Gill, 45, a former New York newspaper man, who became a stock broker, moved to Hollywood, married Rene Adoree, movie actress, opened a tailor shop, divorced Rene, who is now dead, and is now listed as "a Los Angeles business man."

The 19-year-old heiress met him while she was doing a bit on the Hollywood movie lots.

ALL RIGHT IN MEXICO

Whatever mama and the United States courts may think about it, their Ensenada marriage will have the benign blessing of Mexican legality because it was at Juarez, Mexico, that Janet divorced her "incompatible" prince last April 16.

It wasn't necessary to recall that she had been introduced to the Prince by his friend, Prince Girolamo Rospigliosi, the husband of her girlhood chum, Marian. That of her gone on a champagne party with Marian and her husband. That they parted in five days and two annunument suits were thrown out of court.

LEARY BARES FATAL DIET

pears. He found that in man the condition is almost universal with age and often occurs also in the young.

He reasoned that as man is the only animal that eats large quantities of foods containing cholesterol, this substance was the probable cause. He has proved this to his own satisfaction to be so.

Cholesterol, he said, is found in foods like cream, eggs, butter, bacon and cream cheese.

He pointed out that he was not arguing against dairy products, which are necessary in the human diet, but that his discovery shows that some means should be found to ascertain which of them persons should not eat too profusely.

NECESSARY FOR CHILDREN

Dr. Leary said that dairy products are essential to growing children and can be eaten freely by countless adults without harm.

Others, however, are found to be affected by such a diet. Dr. Leary recommended consultation with a reputable family physician concerning this diet, especially for persons who have reached the age of 40 or thereabouts. He pointed out, however, that he had found the condition existing in the bodies of persons as young as 26 years of age.

Dr. Leary, for the first time in medical history, produced a complete photographic study of the condition he described, which is called atherosclerosis.

CITES RUNNER'S DEATH

His photographs showed the complete process by which the arteries are lined with a growth or tissue which eventually shuts off the flow of blood and causes instantaneous death. He mentioned one young victim, whose body came to him for post mortem examination, who died while running from second base to third base in a ball game.

The pictures illustrate the condition both in the human arteries and in animals, which Dr. Leary fed on a cholesterol diet in laboratory experiments.

He has been able to produce the condition in animals by feeding them on this diet so exactly that even experienced medical men have been unable to differentiate between the pictures of human and animal arteries. The resemblance in the tissue structure is so marked that it has been found virtually impossible to differentiate between them.

Dr. Leary also pointed out that cholesterol is a substance required in times of rapid cell production.

EXAMINED 25,000 BODIES

Thus, he said, egg yolk is intended for the embryo and milk for the infant. During childhood a diet of dairy products is essential, but when full growth is attained, it is not necessary and sometimes proves harmful.

During his career Dr. Leary has examined nearly 25,000 bodies, and for ten years has wished to devote his time to a study of cholesterol diets. He resigned his position as professor at Tufts Medical School in 1929 to give more time to this study.

Associates regard his discovery as one of the greatest in the field of medicine in the past 100 years. He made reference to his finding at a medical meeting in Toronto some time ago, but on that occasion details of his lecture did not become generally known.

STEEL STRIKE THREATS GAIN MOMENTUM

By the Associated Press

Threats of a nation-wide steel strike had solidified today into a concrete movement for a walkout of the union contingent of the nation's quarter of a million of raw metal workers.

Meantime it was hoped that emergency action to avert the strike may grow out of a White House conference today.

Demanding recognition, the right to bargain collectively, officials of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Tin and Steel Workers completed plans for a meeting Thursday at which a formal call is expected to be issued unless industry capitulates.

The industrialists were represented as opposed to union recognition on the ground that it involved abrogation of the "open shop principle," but agreed to a government proposal for a three-man arbitration board.

Green Patton, negro, employed in the Republic Steel Corporation's Alabama iron ore fields, where a strike is in progress, was clubbed to death. A half dozen persons were injured in disorders punctuated by bombings, shootings and fist fights.

youthful and intelligent new president of Harvard, tells graduates of the Stevens Institute of Technology that no matter what "social and economic order lies ahead of us, society will demand the luxuries and conveniences afforded by modern technology." Therefore, two professions will survive any troubles, "the engineers and the doctors." Engineers will be needed to provide what people want, and doctors to repair human machinery.

When Dr. Conant says "society will want" he means human society, the whole race, not the silly by-product commonly described as "society."

Human beings do not change, and the human race will want for the next ten thousand years what it has wanted in the past, namely, leisure and a sense of superiority for the few, with luxury, speed, power and safety from want.

The human race is growing along definite lines, just as a chicken grows in the shell. You cannot change the chicken to a mouser or canary bird by talking through the shell, and you cannot change the development of the human race by turning it from one path into another, or by "learned arguments." The race controls, directs and manages itself.

Talking to young men of Canisius College, Postmaster-General Farley advises them to escape from the depression and all their troubles by developing some new idea. He reminds them that Watt, Franklin, Edison, McCormick and Morse, using brains and inventive power, not only made themselves great and independent but provided employment for multitudes.

Thousands of things are being made. Find a better way of doing one of them. And you are "made."

Other days, other methods. When two women came before Solomon, claiming the same baby, Solomon discovered the truth easily by ordering that the baby be cut in two, and half given to each mother. One woman said "no, give the whole baby to the other woman," and Solomon knew that the real mother was the one that did not want the baby cut in two.

In Mexico two ladies, Senora Ocacio and Senora Rodriquez, ask Judge Garrido to decide which is the mother of a girl baby claimed by both. The judge orders no sword, no chopping, but orders a blood test of the two alleged mothers and the infant. The resemblance in two of the blood "types" will show which is the mother.

Solomon's method was more romantic, the Mexican method probably more exact.

Miss Mary Anne Knapp, dead at the age of 108, minus two months, had lived for the last 99 years in the same house in Montgomery County, Pa. What peaceful happiness! Miss Knapp had many centenarians in her family, including General Worrell, of our revolutionary war, who lived to be 112. She was a good Democrat and voted regularly. And said anybody could live 100 years who would "live a good, clean, Christian life." She knew, of course, that 100 years would have seemed nothing to Abraham, to say nothing of Methusaleh, and they never heard of christianity.

Harvard Bartender Plea Scored by Union Head

Well, if you can't work a thing out one way sometimes it can be worked out in another, and if that Cape Cod summer hotel which failed to get a Harvard student for a bartender really wants a collegian bartender, they are available at the Bartenders' Union.

John J. Kearney, business agent of Local 34, said so today in criticizing the practice of obtaining student help for the summer at low wages.

"It didn't surprise me to learn that they have no experienced bartenders at Harvard, because we have them all over here," said Kearney. "We have students from other colleges now training in our own 'college,' and we have college graduates who are full-fledged union bartenders, young and well-mannered and versed in other arts than mixing beverages."

Kearney declared that students placed in summer jobs at low wages are a detriment to experienced men who depend on the particular vocation for a living, and that a halt should be made in this practice.

The clean Center Leaves are the mildest leaves

They Taste Better!

We like telling you that Luckies are made of only clean center leaves. For the clean center leaves are the mildest leaves—they cost more—they taste better. And we're proud of the fact that these choice tobaccos receive the benefit of Lucky Strike's famous process—"It's toasted" for throat protection. But here's a point that's just as impressive: Luckies are round, firm, fully packed with long golden strands of fine tobacco—no loose ends. That's why Luckies "keep in condition"—why you'll find that Luckies do not dry out. Truly, Luckies are all-ways kind to your throat.

BRITONS SPENDING FREELY ON WAY TO RECOVERY

Pay $1.90 Apiece for Peaches and Fight to Get Them, Knickerbocker Reveals In His Survey

An investigation reveals that, while prices for luxuries are high in Great Britain, the Britons are buying freely because they are making money. H. R. Knickerbocker writes in the second article of his series "British Recovery." This continues, even though Great Britain is taking care of 2,200,000 unemployed. Knickerbocker tells how this is being done.

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

London, June 12—Peaches sell in Picadilly for $1.90 apiece. If you want to buy them you must get up early. The best are soon sold out and then you can only get the next best for $1.65 apiece.

Britons buy them at these prices. For Britons are making money.

Go into the shop of Blank and Blank, purveyors to His Majesty the King. They have a large establishment on Piccadilly with the entire first floor front devoted to delicate foods for the ladies and gentlemen of the West End. Ask for peaches.

"VERY NICE PEACH"

"Have you a very nice peach," responds the salesgirl, displaying a mediocre little fruit about half the size of a full grown Georgia or Elberta peach. "These," she said, "are $1.65 each. I'm sorry but our best peaches are sold out. We will have some tomorrow. Yes, $1.90 apiece. The best British peaches, but they are soon gone. It would be wise to order in advance."

Here, too, are strawberries at a guinea a box. A guinea is $5.25. The box holds twenty strawberries. This makes the price a little over twenty-five cents per strawberry.

WAIT FOR AUTOS

Just so, Britons today are ordering their automobiles. For the best British-made car costing a minimum of $12,500. It is necessary to get on a waiting list. The quickest deliveries this company has been able to make in the last year have been six months from the time of ordering. This, however, is very exceptional, and the average wait is a year.

In order to avoid this, as the salesman in a Bond street showroom explained, "Our customers usually, when they buy a car, tell us to put them down for the same car again two years later."

Perhaps, however, the best index of Mayfair opulence is to be found in a certain linen store on Bond street. There the salesman was asked to show his best men's handkerchiefs. He produced an article of the ordinary size, hemstitched.

"When did you last sell any of these?" I asked the salesman.

"Oh," he replied with that air of hauteur that only a Bond street salesman can evince, "a gentleman just yesterday placed an order with us for $1000 worth of these handkerchiefs."

All these are evidences of the prosperity of the upper classes. In no country in the western world is the line of distinction between upper and lower classes so sharply drawn as in England. But how are the lower classes, how are the people faring in Britain's comeback?

A magistrate near Manchester has just sentenced a sixty-year-old woman to two months in the workhouse for stealing a pint of milk. The old woman declared she had been seized with a fainting spell. The magistrate said he regretted but he was compelled to impose sentence.

Is this typical of British social justice? It is not. True, while Mayfair buys peaches at $1.90 each the authorities concerned with unemployment have just established that it ought not to cost more than $1.28 to provide the food for one unemployed man for a week.

SUPPORT IDLE

But for the last two decades Britain has supported its unemployed on a higher standard of living than the jobless in any other country. Today despite the comeback there are still around 2,200,000 unemployed. They are all being given a dole which certainly suffices for their existence, and obviously has sufficed to keep them quieter than in any other country during the world economic depression.

Where is the money coming from? What are the sources of the British wealth which in this second year of recovery already permits a few to live extremely well, the vast majority to live better than they did in 1929, and at the same time support more than 3,000,000 jobless? In the following articles an attempt will be made to trace the course of the British comback.

"Another Knickerbocker article will appear tomorrow."

French Family Roiled by Julia's Elopement

(This is the tenth in a series of articles setting forth some of the highlights in the history of America's oldest and most socially prominent families, soon to be united through the impending nuptials of John Jacob Astor, 3d, and Ellen Tuck French.)

By PEGGY DOYLE

Although the industrial peculiarities of Francis Ormond French, father of Ellen Tuck French, won the family wide and unhappy publicity, the romance of Julia French, her aunt, easily takes the lead in providing unpleasant lore in the French family tree.

The skeleton in the closet, a rather plump fellow by the name of "Handsome Jack" Geraghty, milled over the presses in 1911, when he won the heart and hand of Julia and the indignation of all the living Frenches.

This Mr. Geraghty, son of a hackman at Newport, knew all about automobiles and quite a bit about women. He was employed by the parent of "Aunt Julia" French as a chauffeur, and he hung an extra tire of worry upon a class always subject to raised eyebrows.

Riding beside Julia French in the smart livery of his calling, the handsome chauffeur, Jack Geraghty, won the 17-year-old girl's heart. In one of Mr. French's automobiles, they drove to Center Village, Conn., late one night in August, 1911, and were married by a minister whom they routed out of bed.

A second ceremony was later performed by a Catholic priest, at the insistence of Geraghty's parents, who were devout Catholics.

GIVES HER VIEWS

She was even happier when her mother, who later was to divorce her father, Amos Tuck French, declared a truce and became a rather regular visitor at the simple home in Springfield where Julia and her "Handsome Jack" were living with the latter's parents.

Soon after this, Julia, with what cash she had on hand at the time of the elopement, purchased a little chicken farm in Woburn, Massachusetts. And for a considerable time, Jack raised chickens and sold automobiles and all was very happy in the young Geraghty household.

Jack Junior's birth finally won over Julia's father, her grandparents and her aunt, Mrs. Vanderbilt.

Then came the war. "Handsome Jack" enlisted in the naval aviation, and Julia and the boy went back to her Newport home while he was away.

THEN COMES DIVORCE

These two circumstances combined to change everything. Julia sued her personable young husband for divorce, charging neglect, and she was given custody of their son.

Geraghty did not contest the divorce. Some time later he met, loved and married another society girl, Miss Amy Bluets of Boston, while Julia, in July, 1921, married Howard T. Williams, a Boston insurance man.

(Tomorrow's story will continue with the recital of the loves of the Frenches).

Quincy police expect to have their two-way radio in operation by July 1, it was announced today after completion of the outside installation work on the apparatus. They will be the first New England department to operate with two-way radio equipment.

The complete equipment is expected to cost $33,000. The 68-foot tower on the roof of the police station, which is to be used for sending and receiving messages, was finished today and work on the inside installation and on the police cars will start at once.

The installation is being carried on under the direction of Special Officer John P. Duffy, Jr., who holds a first-class radiophone license. He was the first officer in New England to pass requirements for this license.

What Our Readers Say

In contributing to this column, writers are asked to be brief. Letters which are too long may not be used. Name and address of the contributor must accompany each letter, but, if requested, initials only will be used.

SLUMS SHOULD VANISH

Editor, Boston American:

We congratulate you on your editorial in the Friday, June 8, 1934, American headed "Slum Action Needed."

We heartily endorse the sentiment you so ably expressed. This type of publicity should go a long way towards arousing the interest so urgently needed at this time to secure for Massachusetts our share of the funds being distributed all over the nation.

It is apparent to right thinking citizens that the older cities of the country with the more obsolete housing, like the Roxbury district of Boston, should be the first to receive attention.

Housing Committee.

Editor, Boston American:

With the legislature about to adjourn, the committee investigating the service charges we have been paying the Boston Consolidated Gas Co. for two years reported the bill out Thursday.

Why did not this committee do this in March or April? They have had this thing for four months and it sure looks queer to be reported out so late.

What I fear is that this measure to do away with service charges will be put over until next year. It looks queer.

This should be retroactive to February when Senator Madden put in his amendment, gumming up the bill.

Work fast and throw the light of publicity on it and inform the public to watch the vote of their representatives and senators.

Dedham Gardens to Be Open

ON TUESDAY, JUNE 19, from two to six, seven charming gardens in Dedham will be opened to the public.

Mrs. F. R. Nourse's garden is terraced and leads down to a pool in the meadows.

Mrs. Charles L. Harding's Italian garden at Burntwood culminates in a little summer house over the lake where the swans swim in hopefully for a bit of tea cake.

Mrs. Leslie Soule's house of weathered brick overlooks the Charles River. The garden, enclosed by a brick wall, is an intimate extension of the house and by June 19, the Madonna lillies and Delphenium will be making a tri-colored pattern against the bricks.

Mrs. Leslie Soule

Mrs. G. R. Fearing Sr.'s rose garden and beautiful old orchard looking off to Blue Hill is so well known as to need no further description. The swimming pool in the distance has given endless pleasure to the many friends of the charming hostess.

Mrs. G. R. Fearing Jr.'s gay little garden is enclosed by a brick wall and gives one a feeling of French seclusion as it leads the guests out of the living room along the twinkling paths.

Garden on the Side of a Hill

MRS. F. S. CONVERSE'S COOL little garden climbs steps up the hill under the trees. It is happily intimate, and planned on a small scale. The fountain trickles by the side and one feels that only a musician with an artistic wife could have planned anything as individual and gratifying.

Mrs. William A. Whitcomb who so graciously served refreshments last year at her famous old Warren estate of Karlstein will do the same again this year.

Mrs. Howell Maynard is in charge of those "Guardians of the Gate" who will punch the tickets and direct the visitors.

There will be arrows pointing the way from Dedham square and several people will lend their cars to transport visitors to their destinations.

Tickets may be obtained at the gardens, the Dedham drug stores, or from Miss Mary Snelling, Dedham 1574. Miss Snelling is chairman of the board of the Dedham Social Service for which worthy charity these gardens are being opened.

Lights and Shadows

By George Holland

Four or five new faces to the screen will be seen in "The Thin Man," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of Dashiell Hammett's brittle piece of detective-story writing which comes to the State Theater Friday. There are famous film stand-bys such as William Powell and Myrna Loy, Maureen O'Sullivan and Minna Gombell, for three recruits from the stage, Porter Hall, Caesar Romero, and Henry Wadsworth have been given prominent parts.

Dashiell Hammett

W. S. Van Dyke, director of "The Thin Man," and one of Hollywood's most convivial companions and faithful friends, has been forever chasing rainbows that might solidify into that elusive thing a screen found one in Edwina Booth, the blonde novice he guided through Africa in the making of "Trader Horn." Poor Edwina, however, ended up a victim of jungle fever, her career halted.

Edwina Booth

It was the director's insistence that saw Harry Carey cast as "Horn." Mr. Carey, an old and accomplished star of "horse operas," contributed a mighty nice job, too. Now, Mr. Van Dyke has gambled with the picture possibilities of three newcomers. Mr. Romero played at the Shubert theater here in "Dinner at Eight" a year ago. Porter Hall was in the New York company of "The Dark Tower" this past season, and Mr. Wadsworth made a hit in some forgotten play last fall in New York.

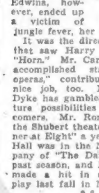
I smiled a bit, however, when descriptive dispatches leaning toward the favorable as far as "The Thin Man" is concerned, told of finding exactly the right character in a scurrying Hollywood to play the part of the "thin man" in the picture.

The story went blithely along, giving the exact proportions of the actor, his height, his age, and collar-size, and he's trying except his past experience. When the name was mentioned, it being Edward Ellis, I was wondering whether the boys are trying to palm off one of Broadway's grandest troupers on us poor hinterlanders as a newcomer.



Edward Ellis

Broadway's Edward Ellis gave one of the outstanding performances of 1928 as the criminal lawyer in Maurine Watkins' satire, "Chicago." He is such a "newcomer" that I'll wager there are a dozen pictures of him in the "morgue," that cutely-named sanctum in a newspaper shop where everything under the sun, and many of the spots upon it, are carefully filed away.

Well, I can't lose the bet. If there are no pictures of my old friend, Edward, I can just cross out the last few lines. If there are pictures, one will be inserted hereabouts.

Here, form New York comes news that it is a pleasure to print. At the age of 70, your old friend Richard B. Harrison, "De Lawd" of "The Green Pastures," will find himself a star. The benevolent, white-haired old gentleman who made Boston love him a year ago the past winter, when the famous theatrical fabi, played at the Colonial theater, will find his name in lights on September 28, in Norfolk, Va., when "The Green Pastures" will begin its third and final tour of the United States and Canada. The evening will mark nothing unforeseen happening—Mr. Harrison's 1500th performance in the role.

Baby Shirley at Memorial

Boston gets another world premiere of an important picture Saturday when "Baby, Take a Bow," starring the spectacular child, Shirley Temple, comes to Keith's Memorial Theatre. James Dunn, Claire Trevor and Alan Dinehart are featured in "Baby Take a Bow," in which Dunne plays little Shirley's daddy.

In a brief six months, the period which has seen "Stand Up and Cheer" and "Little Miss Marker" reach production and release, tiny Shirley, child of a Beverly Hills banker has reached stardom.

"Baby Take a Bow," is a comedy-drama. Miss Trevor carries the romantic sequences with Mr. Dunne.

JIMMY CAGNEY AND MARGARET LINDSAY HEAD CAST FOR WARNER FILM

Paramount Will Produce "All the King's Horses" With Carl Brisson in Joe Cook Role

By JERRY HOFFMAN

Pinch-Hitting for Louella O. Parsons

(Copyright, 1934, Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, June 12—Jimmy Cagney and Margaret Lindsay have a pleasant surprise coming. They are a vital part of the big plans Mervyn Le Roy has been making for the first picture he will direct since he married Doris Warner.

Carefully he has read many stories and considered many ideas. After his longest rest since he started as prop boy at Paramount, Mervyn is ready to begin work, and he has chosen "Gentlemen Are Born" for his return to the Warner studio. Harry Sauber wrote this story about a society girl who runs away on the night of her betrothal to a socialite and meets one of the common peepul. Mervyn believes the role will make Margaret a star and will reveal a gentle, soft-spoking Cagney fans will love as much as the tough little Jim.

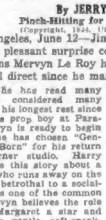
No one was ever so discouraged as Carl Brisson the night he went to see the preview of his first picture, "Murder At The Vanities." Rarely has any one been more elated when a showing was over. Paramount shared his elation by renewing his contract the same night. The girls like Brisson, and Emanuel Cohen has bought "All the Kings' Horses" as his next starring vehicle. This is the New York and Chicago musical comedy hit by Lawrence Clark and Max Gierseberg which ran originally as a light opera in Europe called "Carlo Rocco." Equally happy is Kitty Carlisle, the attractive brunette who was opposite Carl in "Vanities." She will be his leading lady again.



Kitty Carlisle

I like the description of the next picture featuring little Jean Parker, "Have a Heart." A

Jean Parker

"Seventh Heaven" of the Ghetto is what they call it at M-G-M. Jean is to have the company of Jimmy Dunn in this musical drama. Jimmy, now in New York, is being paged by Dave Butler, who will direct and who wrote the story with Buddy De Sylva. They still feel, and with good reason, that Jean will be one of the biggest stars in pictures. But three carefully chosen stories may well be used from now on.

* * *

When Ray Wise, Hollywood cameraman reverted to type and became Mala for "Eskimo," it looked like a permanent job as a cameraman was being sacrificed for a now-and-then career as an actor. Mala, however, seems to be doing all right. Fans have asked for him continuously but there has been a lack of proper stories. Phil Goldstone has solved the problem for the Eskimo who originally filmed once for him. Phil has signed Mala for a year. He has "The Bar Sinister," a novel by Carl Floyd with an Alaskan background, for one picture. If a deal can be arranged with D. W. Griffith, "Broken Blossoms" will be another.

Snapshots of Hollywood

AUBREY SMITHS driving to San Diego for a cricket tournament; VIRGINIA PINE out of the hospital and lunching with MAE BUNDAY; ANN SOTHERN opening her new beach house twenty miles beyond Malibu. "And the little mouse said" that's all today. See you tomorrow!

Funny Man Held at Park

Established firmly as a worthy successor to Frank Tinney, Bert Lahr, and "Sliding Billy" Weston, not to except the versatile Jimmy Barton, as one of the ablest comedians in burlesque, "Red" Marshall repeats his performance of last week at the Park Theatre, where, under the insistence of hundreds of fans, Marshall was "held over" for this week's bill in an extravaganza entitled, "Seashore Scandals."

Mary Joyce is most valuable in the supporting cast, and Harry K. Fields, Shorty McAllister, Bert Gean (a Boston boy), Louise Stewart, Margie White and Jean Lee ably assist the star comedian.

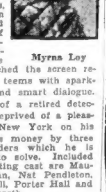
'Thin Man' for Loew's State

Scheduled to open last Friday, "The Thin Man," co-starring William Powell and Myrna Loy in the screen version of Dashiell Hammett's new novel, will positively be seen on the screen this coming Friday at Loew's State theatre.

Different from all other detective films, "The Thin Man" is said to be one of the most gripping and exciting pictures that has reached the screen recently, yet it teems with sparkling humor and smart dialogue. The story is of a retired detective who is deprived of a pleasure trip to New York on his wealthy wife's money by three baffling murders which he is called upon to solve. Included in the supporting cast are Maureen O'Sullivan, Nat Pendleton, Minna Gombell, Porter Hall and Henry Wadsworth.



Myrna Loy

Visitors Tabu

Here's one of the reasons why the studios bar visitors on the lot. Recently a woman visited the set where Ronald Colman was making "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back." She said she was from London and wanted to speak to him because they would have so much in common, since Colman is also a Britisher. Overhearing her remarks, Colman tried to make an unobtrusive exit, but was spotted, and had to engage in conversation with his caller for several minutes. At the moment of interruption he was rehearsing the next scene, and consequently Colman had to take time out to relearn his lines!

"Iolanthe" in New Shubert Triumph

By GEORGE HOLLAND

"Iolanthe," the comic operetta which shows off Gilbert and Sullivan at their practical, showmanly best to many observers, including this one, enthralled a cordial audience last night as the season's final theatrical premiere took place at the Shubert Theater.

Melodic, spirited, essentially charming, "Iolanthe"—the first major spoofing to words-and-music of such august bodies as Parliament, or, if George S. Kaufman, Morrie Ryskind and the Gershwin Freres will beg my pardon, the United States Supreme Court and other Washington potentates,—won at least equal favor with the three Gilbert and Sullivan travesties that have gone before.

I mentioned Gilbert and Sullivan's practicality and showmanship, because, beguiled although one constantly is by trick tunes, laughable lyrics and extravagant characterizations, the intelligent use of much beauty and little waste is noteworthy in this political satire. The very scenty chorus of female "fairies" appear in one set of costumes throughout. England's musical comedy peerage disport in their rich robes throughout. Frank Moulan as the Lord Chancellor discards his grey, roll of wig, and he is complete as to strange costuming. And the two gay acts are played in two simple but effective scenic vistas.

These observations are made in tribute, not in disparity. "Iolanthe," in the best of the sly moods of its distinguished creators needs no moving scenery, revolving scenes, elevated stage, or a change of costume five times an act. It has an idea, sprinkled with the star-dust of genius. Or is this all generally known?

The highlight of the evening to me was the elevation to a principal role of a very capable young man named John Eaton, who sang and acted—yes, acted—the role of Earl of Mountararat. I am sure that none of the acclaimed Savoyards such as Mr. Moulan, Messrs. Herbert and Allan Waterous, Vivian Hart, Roy Cropper, Vera Ross and Dean Dickens or the minor girls and boys will object if the praises of Mr. Eaton be sung andante and robusto.

Mr. Eaton's general work has not yet won the praise-smearing bestowed on many of his mates'. I do not dispute that perhaps there has been a good reason for the tardiness of him loping along in his real stride. If it will help, and I hope it will, he should be assured that he has talent, grace, personality, acting ability and a real chance in the ranks of operetta.

A trio—that trio that becomes partly a quartet with Private Willis' gyrations in tempo to the music—won most encores last night. It was, as of course all Gilbert and Sullivan addicts know full well, the ditty entitled "Fair Heart Ne'er Won Fair Lady." Mr. Moulan, Mr. Cropper and Mr. Eaton sang it and danced it for a fare-thee-well at the premiere showing. "Iolanthe" is the last week's bill of the current repertory under the management of S. M. Charlook. It should certainly be seen.

Rare as a Day

In June (to complete the caption), is the perfect camera face. Jean Muir has it, cameramen aver. She comes in support of Richard Barthelmess to the Paramount and Fenway screens Thursday in "A Modern Hero."

A. Sten at Fine Arts

Final screenings of the Rene Clair-directed film, "Sous Les Toits des Paris," (Under the Roofs of Paris), are scheduled for the Fine Arts Theatre today. For tomorrow only, Anna Sten and Fritz Kortner appear in "The Brothers Karamazov," a film adaptation of the Russian classic.

SHOTS FIRED AS POLICE CHASE BANDIT GANGS

Two bandit chases, extending over an area of 10 miles, in which a score of shots were fired, kept police of Brookline and Greater Boston on the jump today.

The first chase resulted after Joseph Nevins, 11 Eggleston street, Jamaica Plain, counter-man at the Lorraine diner, was held up by two armed men and robbed of $50.

A car with three men was caught after a chase, in which shots were fired, at Perkins street, Jamaica Plain. One youth was taken and booked as a suspicious person. Two got away.

Harry Haynes, 50, St. Mary street, Boston, while delivering milk, was held up and slugged over the head by two thugs. One of the bandits held a gun. They got $1.50 in money. Patrolman Wilbur McMillan, some distance away, rushed to Haynes' help, and fired two shots at a car disappearing down the street. The car was pursued and finally overhauled in Dorchester, after a fusillade of police bullets.

Three youths in the car could not be identified by the milk man and were released.

MERRY FRINKS OFFER NEW FUN

"The Merry Frinks" are giving a theater party to ten lucky persons each day beginning today. It's a grand and merry time for all at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters and while the fun is on we say the more the merrier. You can join the "Merry Frinks" theater party by reading the Boston American every day.

Our "Picture Snatcher" man will go out on the highways and byways of old Boston Town. He will attend the ball games. He will attend the sporting events, social events and night clubs. He'll have his camera and will snap pictures of the crowds at each of the affairs or events he attends. The following day the picture will blaze forth in all its glory in the Boston American, but around ten persons' heads will be a magic ring and if you are one of the persons in a "Magic Merry Frink Ring" identify yourself at the Boston American office and you will be given two tickets for the Paramount or Fenway theaters.

"The Merry Frinks" will be the attraction at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters beginning Thursday. The cast includes Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Guy Kibbee, Aline MacMahon, Helen Lowell, and Frankie Darro. The companion feature will be Richard Barthelmess in "A Modern Hero" with Jean Muir and all star cast.

DUCE, HITLER TO DISCUSS ARMS

By Universal Service

London, June 12—Austria and armaments will be the two principal topics which Chancellor Adolf Hitler and Premier Mussolini will discuss when they meet for the first time in a secluded Italian villa Thursday.

It was learned today the momentous conversation will not be a "Venetian love affair" unless the German Nazi leader is prepared to climb down from his high horse regarding Austrian independence.

Il Duce will refuse to yield one inch on his position that Austria must remain independent, and events of the past few days in Austria, where a wave of terrorism has swept the nation, have stiffened his attitude. The Nazi bombings in Austria are not considered appropriate confetti for the intended courtship of Rome by Berlin.

Pay When You Are Well Now

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

American Congress of Surgeons in Chicago sprung a new one that was 5000 years old.

But the radio comics won't steal it—for it's no gag.

The surgeons suggest voluntary prepayment health insurance.

What that means? It's the Chinese system of paying a doctor when you are feeling good and not giving him a dime when you are sick.

He does his share by not coming around.

There is a buzzer in the ointment, however.

The Chinese system of paying the doctor in advance will conflict with the American habit of not paying him at all.

2 DIE AS FRENCH BOMBER CRASHES

Chartres, France, June 12—Two military airmen were burned to death in a crash of a bombing plane here.

The fliers were making a night practice flight and the plane, making a forced landing because of motor trouble, struck a house. The craft burst into flames. Two of the crew of four escaped.

NEW PRICES CHANGE THE PICTURE

IF YOU READ the papers last week you probably saw that Plymouth had substantially reduced its prices.

Unless you are in the automobile business you probably don't realize just what this means.

It means the prices of "all three" are now so close you can well afford to dismiss that factor from your mind. What you should think about today is WHAT YOU GET FOR YOUR MONEY.

For instance, take this question of SAFETY. Surely nothing is more important than the protection of your family.

When you put your foot on the brakes you want your car to stop RIGHT IN ITS TRACKS.

When emergencies happen you don't want to depend on ordinary brakes that often make your car skid and swerve dangerously.

With Hydraulic Brakes you can jam the pedal down to the floor and STOP DEAD. The marks on the pavement will track straight ahead.

Even if Plymouth COST MORE it would be worth it . . . just for this one feature alone. But add to this the security of a Safety-Steel Body . . . the comfort of Floating Power engine mountings . . . the smoother ride of Individual Front Wheel Springing . . . and remember you get these features in Plymouth without spending one extra red cent.

Don't buy your next car through habit. Don't be blind to the changes that have taken place in the low price field. Go look at a Plymouth today . . . at any Dodge, DeSoto or Chrysler dealer. Buy no car until you do.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON, TUESDAY, JUNE 12, 1934

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

Now that the Dedham trial is over and it is permitted to comment without running the risk of contempt of court, it is still timely to mention a certain report made to the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association, held in New York the last week in May. The committee had to do with legal aspects of psychiatry and the report advocated "radical reforms in legal and penal procedure in capital cases in which a plea of insanity has been entered by the defendant."

Robert E. Rogers

That, of course, was the Millens-Faber trial. Public opinion, so far as I have been able to find out, did not take the insanity defence seriously, for all its long-drawn-out complexity of method, and the comparatively small amount of time taken by the jury in its deliberations would seem to show that the 12 men on whom the responsibility rested did not take it very seriously either.

The chairman of the legal aspects committee presented recommendations which had been reached by joint considerations of four bodies, the American Psychiatric, the American Medical, the American Neurological and the American Bar Associations. This fourfold authority makes the findings of unusual interest.

Briefly, it is suggested that most of the technical testimony now allowed to be presented to a jury be eliminated and that the defendant, whether acquitted or convicted, be sent to a state institution for observation for an indefinite period. Only if the evidence as to insanity is so overwhelming and so plain that a lay jury can understand it, shall that jury be allowed to pass upon the defendant's mental condition. Otherwise, the question of insanity shall not come up and the defendant shall be tried on the supposition that he is sane.

If the defendant about whom there is any question be acquitted, he shall be kept under observation until he can be given an absolutely clean bill of mental health. He is not to be freed, not even under habeas corpus proceedings, until he can be discharged as sane.

If the defendant is convicted then he shall undergo the same period of observation. If the physicians decide he is mentally sound, he shall be returned to the court for sentence. If insane, he is to be confined for treatment.

The purpose of this change is to eliminate the enormous amount of time taken up by the present system of turning a murder trial over to a corps of alienists, neurologists, and psychiatrists for a protracted duel of technical evidence and argument, most of which neither the judge, the court officers, or the jury are capable of comprehending. In the Millen-Faber trial, for instance, over half the time —at a rough estimate—was taken up, first by the argument before the court, with the jury absent, as to whether Faber should go on the stand as an exhibit, and, later, by the more conventional insanity defence of the three men. With the insanity defence eliminated the cost of the trial could have been halved, and the same result, though postponed, would most likely be achieved.

It is obvious that this suggestion would strengthen the power and prestige of the experts, in that they, and not the jury, would have the final say in the matter. It would involve also the very important question of the defendant's constitutional rights. Certainly such a procedure would eliminate much of what we read about in the recent Dedham trial, particularly the instances where counsel on both sides were seriously using their experts in an attempt to "force cards" on the jury—that is, to emphasize as evidence certain instances which seemed not merely to other experts but even to the layman following the case very dubious indeed.

In fact, I cannot help feeling that, in spite of the judge's corrective rulings, the average educated listener or reader would be inclined to think that the question of what sanity and responsibility consisted in had been hopelessly confused. Partly this is due to the very bothersome definition of legal sanity—the question of "knowing the difference between right and wrong"—and partly to the great leeway given in the matter of expert testimony to drag psychological red herrings across the trail.

In fact, most of us would agree with a statement of Dr. Bernard Sachs, president of the New York Academy of Medicine, at an earlier session of this same meeting, in which he warned against the danger of complicating the whole question by attempting to force on the law theories of psychiatry which are interesting and far-reaching but as yet unproved.

"It is fortunate in a way that the courts of law still uphold the doctrine that man is controlled by his conscious and not his subconscious acts, and that he is responsible for his actions, in keeping with that ruling," So said Dr. Sachs. And all the people shall reply Amen!

NEEDHAM PLEADS FOR UNITY BILL

The Royal Bow

Mrs. Frances Cunningham Gray of Marlboro street, Back Bay, is among the 12 richly gowned U. S. women who will curtsy before the King and Queen in Buckingham Palace tonight.

BOSTON WOMAN IN COURT BOW

Mrs. Francis Cunningham Gray of 349 Marlboro street is one of the twelve American women who will achieve a brief moment of social glory this evening in being presented to the King and Queen of England at Buckingham Palace in London

The entire American group should pass in and out of the throne room in the space of one minute

The line of women, their plumes sticking upright from their heads, enters the throne room and as each woman passes the royal dais, her name is announced to the King and Queen

Each of the debutantes and dowagers presented, bends her knee and moves on out of the throne room to join the men. American husbands usually wait outside the palace or at their hotels.

CARDINAL HITS 'RED' LAW

"Communistic and utterly impossible."

This was that characterization of the proposed amendment of the child labor law made by Cardinal O'Connell at the alumni banquet at Boston College, as he decared for himself and for Catholic America opposition to the amendment.

Speaking of the amendment, the Cardinal directed his words to Edward L. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor, seated near him at the head table. He said:

"I am opposed to the child labor bill as it is framed. We are not opposed to regulations which aid children, which keep children from working long hours at work too hard for them. We are, of course, heartily in favor of anything of that kind.

ELY WILL SIGN RACING BILL, SAY FRIENDS

Labor, Party Leaders to Back Measure at Hearing

Governor Ely will sign the bill authorizing the licensing of horse and dog racing with the pari-mutuel system of betting permitted according to those closely associated with the chief executive, if the measure reaches his desk.

The bill carries a referendum by counties to the people in the November election, designed so that they may vote separately on the horse and dog features. Provision also is made for a referendum trial of the question every four years.

The measure has passed the House and will be given a public hearing by the Senate ways and means committee tomorrow at the State House. Strong pleas will be made at this hearing for a favorable report by organized labor members of both parties in the Legislature, cattle breeders and sportsmen.

REVIVED INDUSTRY SEEN

While declining to state his position, Governor Ely said today that when he recently condemned the proposal to set up a state lottery for revenue purposes, he did not include horse and dog racing.

"The lottery provided no contest," he explained.

Breeders see visions of a revived industry, labor expects to profit from the building of race tracks, new revenue for the state will be assured, and a death blow, its proponents believe, will be struck at various illegal forms of betting now practiced throughout the state.

Under the bill a state racing commission would be set up, consisting of three persons to be named by the governor.

CITIES, TOWNS TO GAIN

The racing season would start April 18 and end Oct. 1, with the restrictions that no races be held between Aug. 15 and Sept. 30, except in connection with a state or county fair.

Each licensee would pay to the commission at the day following each race a sum equal to 3% per cent of the total amount deposited on the preceding by patron wagering.

Of the receipts accruing to the state from racing, 25 per cent, after deducting the commission's expenses, must be distributed to the cities and towns.

5 FROM BOSTON TO BE PRIESTS

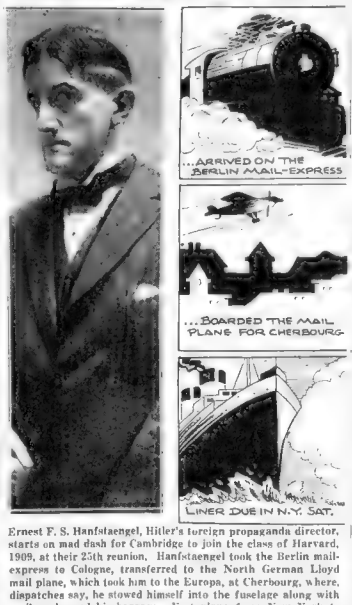
Five young men of the Boston archdiocese will be ordained to the priesthood on June 17 at the seminary of the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of America, Maryknoll, N. Y., by the Most Rev. James Anthony Walsh, D.D., Maryknoll Superior General.

They are Rev. James E. Fitzgerald, 32 Lawrence road, Medford; Rev. Daniel W. Cheney, 14 Orchard street, Amesbury; Rev. Edmund L. Ryan, 43 Milwood street, Dorchester; Rev. William M. Mackesy, 391 Western avenue, Lynn, and Rev. Francis W. Keelan, of 29 Burnham street, Belmont.

Two other Maryknoll seminarians from Massachusetts to be ordained are Rev. Bernard T. Welch, of Fitchburg, and Rev. J. Joseph Daly, of Worcester.

The five young priests from the Boston archdiocese will celebrate their first high masses at their home parishes on Sunday, June 24.

Hanfstaengel on Way



Ernest F. S. Hanfstaengel, Hitler's foreign propaganda director, starts on mad dash for Cambridge to join the class of Harvard, 1909, at their 25th reunion. Hanfstaengel took the Berlin mail-express to Cologne, transferred to the North German Lloyd mail plane, which took him to the Europa, at Cherbourg, where, dispatches say, he stowed himself into the fuselage along with mail sacks and his baggage. First plane from New York to Boston will probably complete Hanfstaengel's hectic trip to revisit Alma Mater.

Hanfstaengl Outbreaks Barred at Harvard

Drastic punishment will be meted out to Harvard students who stage any demonstration against Ernest F. S. Hanfstaengl, right hand man of Chancellor Adolph Hitler of Germany, authorities made known today.

Student members of anti-Nazi organizations at Harvard declared today, however, that they will not be under any college jurisdiction after Thursday when the college term officially terminates.

Therefore, any students who might remain in Cambridge to protest the presence of Hitler's lieutenant providing it is not staged on Harvard property will be at the mercy of local police.

EXAMINATIONS THURSDAY.

Harvard officials stated that Thursday is the last day that examinations are scheduled for the college.

Members of two of Harvard's organizations that are anti-Hitlerites, stated that they had not formulated any plans for a demonstration. They also declared that they have held their final meeting for the year.

Hanfstaengl, Harvard '00, about whom a storm of controversy has waged since he sent a $1000 gift scholarship for a son of a 1909 alumnus, will be treated with the utmost respect on the

Until his dashing departure from Germany yesterday—by a last minute ride on a plane to catch the North German Lloyd liner Europa at Cherbourg, his visit here was in doubt.

Then came the order from Harvard that he was to be treated as any other returning alumnus.

Heads of the anti-Hitler organizations at Harvard remained silent today. But one leader said they were standing on a previous statement decreed at the Hitler lieutenant when he was first talked of as a visitor.

POLICE "NO PROTECTION"

"If you come here," said that statement, "and all the police which your anonymous friends will provide for your necessary protection, will insulate you from the boiling hatred of the toiling masses of America for the murderer of their German brethren."

2 MORE SEIZED AT CONSULATE

A young woman and a male student, picketing in front of the German consulate at 131 State street, were arrested in the noon hour today when they refused to obey police orders to keep moving.

At the Milk street station they gave their names as Miss Elizabeth Stewart, 21, artist of West 92nd street, New York City, and Baldwin Amiaux, 23, of Beacon street. They carried placards denouncing Hitler and demanding the freedom of Ernest Thaelmann. They are charged with picketing and loitering.

A large crowd had gathered near the consulate anticipating a demonstration.

POLICE SCHOOL FOR TRAINING IS URGED

A. Lawrence Lowell Asks Towns, Cities Aid in Fight

At a crowded legislative hearing General Daniel Needham, state commissioner of public safety today strongly urged the joint committee on the judiciary to report favorably the police unification bill.

General Needham urged amendments to provide for a central training school to give two months' training course for policemen, to have the chief of detectives placed under civil service and to have the proposed bureau of detectives remain in the division of state police.

RETAIN ALL RIGHTS

Under this system, any municipal policeofficer transferred to the detective bureau would retain all his civil service rights.

He also supported the advisory police council, declaring that state, city and town police officials would favor such a board once it was clearly understood what the bill provided.

A. Lawrence Lowell, speaking in favor of the legislation, declared that exactly the same conditions confronts the people of Massachusetts confronted the English people 150 years ago.

At that time advances in transportation and the knowledge of criminals where money was to be had started a crime wave. He urged the towns and cities of the state to co-operate, through providing a trained police personnel, in coping with the modern criminal.

RENEWS REQUEST

Colonel William J. Kelville, chairman of the citizens committee for public safety, renewed his request that the state commissioner of public safety be given authority to take entire charge of police operations in time of emergency.

Attorney George A. McLaughlin, representing the Massachusetts Police Association first speaker for the opposition, denied that the bill was a unification measure and said, "The bill is a patchwork and nothing more. The proposed police council or commission is not necessary."

He declared that there has always been co-operation between police departments.

Charlestown Jail Filled to Capacity

A "full house" sign was put up at the State Prison in Charlestown, today, when the population reached 927 inmates, of which number 154 are "lifers." Practically every cell in the institution is occupied with the exception of the three in the death house.

Unless relief is afforded prison officials say they will have to make a dormitory in the corridor of the south wing extension. In some of the cells the men are paired up and the schoolroom in the south wing has been used for some time as a dormitory.

Runaway Horse Halted by Police

After a chase through Charlestown streets, shortly before noon today, Patrolmen Joseph McCleary and William Caskell, in a police car captured a runaway horse on Mt. Vernon Avenue. Officer McCleary grabbed the horse's bridle to bring him to a stop. The horse had broken away from a stable on Wapping street.

NEW YORK
DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, June 12—Manhattan is losing its sharp consciousness of celebrity. Even the autograph collectors dwindle. No particular reason. June one of those things. Rudy Vallee is no longer followed. Neither is Mary Pickford. Lionel Barrymore recently walked Broadway with only a few head-turns.

Jeritza and Lily Pons shop on the avenue without a swirl of gawkers. The persistent crowd that awaited the daily arrival of the 20th Century for movie stars turns to something else. Mayor La Guardia goes to the opera or play with no buzz-fuzz. And they actually ignored Lupe Velez at a recent first night.

Only two celebrities remain with distinct power to start the pack in full cry again. These are Lindbergh and Garbo, who have whetted curiosity to the drooling point by constant refusal to be seen. New York loves to be snubbed. Some think national idleness is abating and lessens the celebrity furor.

Others say it is no longer possible to pick up small change selling autographs. The exchange on West 46th street has closed, and there is no market whatever. Jimmy Walker's signature, that once brought $2, is now procurable for a dime. Babe Ruth's brings only a nickel.

Sime Silverman's son Sid is the most self-effacing figure in the Broadway world. Since his famous dad's passing he has, with Abel Green and Jack Puiaski, capably piloted Variety, dividing time between New York and Hollywood. He is the husband of the attractive Marie Saxon, former dancer, and when not at his office is home. To him Broadway is a news center, not a playground.

Smart florists report a perk, presaging at least a mental upswing. The well-dressed man is dropping in for a morning lapel flower again, a gesture that almost vanished when the brokers went broke. The morning I saw Frank Crowninshield adorned with a blue corn flower; Owen Davis, Jr., a white carnation, and Aubrey Eads a red rosebud. Also fewer men are hatless along streets this summer.

And up in the jungles of Harlem the dusky dudes, who featured purple and yellow ground length overcoats, are now going in for sideburns clear down to here. Giving many of the high yellows a Spanish grandee effect. Duke Ellington was first to sport them. And Cab Calloway gave them extra panache.

The most attractively decorated home in Harlem is that of the singer Ethel Waters, who rode to fame on a wavering blue note, along 7th avenue. She turned a high-priced interior decorator loose there blanche. The first floor is, quite appropriately, a study in brown from heavy chocolate to light sepia relieved only by a general carpeting of honey shade. She has, next to Bill Robinson, become wealthiest of the colored performers, her fortune topping that of Florence Mills, which was slightly over $100,000 at its peak. Oh, yes, one of the Black Bell's newest night spots is called the Ubangi Club, where African bush tom toms beat a barbaric bolero until dawn.

Harlem's richest and, by long odds, most celebrated citizens, Bill Robinson, has been by popular vote elected "Mayor of Harlem." Like all locality mayors, he pays no difference and intercedes for those who fail afoul the law. Robinson is a typical levee-strutting type, with a derby cocked on one side and clothes that would shame a zebra. But his cockiness is in good fun. He is a very humble citizen whose tap dancing, although past 50, brings him $1100 a week. He has played more benefits than Eddie Cantor. And with little ballyhoo.

The bicycle revival continues its fast pace. Central Park has a steady stream of pedalers, as have the highways further out. The girls wear sleeveless jerseys, shorts that merely cover their hips and berets with a bright flounce tassel, gloves matching the tassel. Many are the richly upholstered maids we used to see in stunty roadsters and Packard sport tops hitting it up for Long Island spas. And in their new biking role appear to be having even more fun.

The only other customer in a 46th street barber shop today was getting the works—a 12 mud massage and violet ray spray. A manicurist was glossing his nails while the nine boys flannel was hitting up a flourish acksack-acketytack. I peeped into his batband going out. It bore the name of a merchant in Amarillo, Tex. Twenty years ago it might have worn a Gallipolis (O.) label. Country boys, coming to town, always bust loose first in the barber shop.

Given in Marriage

—By Adele Garrison—

HUGH PROPOSES THAT MADGE ACCOMPANY HIM ON HIS RIDE TO MEET AVIS ARLEN —TO KEEP HER FROM THE FARMHOUSE.

CHAPTER 61

I SAT STARING at my telephone receiver as Philip Veritzen hung up he, too dazed at his last words for even the mechanical process of replacing it. Finally Hugh put out his hand and took the instrument, which had dropped to my lap unheeded.

"Finished, aren't you?" he queried softly, and as my receiver hung up the phone, he swung round facing me again.

"I gather that I am to meet Miss Arlen at presumably at Patchogue, and bring her out to your home?" he said. "I know you thought that was necessary with her may prove embarrassing, especially if your husband knows you have asked me to bring her?"

"I wanted to tell him that I knew that better than he did, but with the feeling that I must not discuss Dicky with him, I took refuge in equivocation.

HUGH'S PLAN

"I don't think Dicky will think anything about it," I said. "I doubt if he will even know she is there. He and Harry are so deep in electrical decorations —we are doing everything ourselves, and we have so little time—that they are simply oblivious to everything else."

He sprang to his feet with eyes shining.

"Then—if that is so—it is such a marvelous day—may I not propose a substitute plan?"

"I cannot promise to accept it," I told him, smiling, "but at least I can listen attentively to it, and I promise it my most serious consideration."

"Am I right in thinking you do not relish the prospect of having Avis Arlen come to your home?"

"I dread it." I told him frankly, "not for myself, but because I cannot help thinking she will do or say something unpleasant which may upset Marv. To my mind, Avis is capable of anything."

"I agree with you," he said slowly, "and for that reason I wondered if it might not be better for her to come no farther than Patchogue. I could be you down there in an hour and a half, your interview with her certainly would not take more than half an hour, and you would be back well before dinner—before dark, even. I am sure the drive would do you good."

FEAR OF DICK

"I know it would" I told him "Then—" he said tentatively, and there was such joyous expectancy in his voice that I began to waver from the snap decision I had made, entailing a refusal of the proposal which I did not deny was most attractive to me.

I began to consider pros and cons. There really was no reason why I should not go. All the preparations for the wedding were going along smoothly. There was but one objection—Dicky's possible — nay certain — unfavorable reaction to my going.

A rebellious thought shot up from an unsuspected corner of my consciousness, and I realized that in the days since the telephone message from the mysterious "Floss" to Dicky, rebellion had lurked there like a coiled serpent, thrusting up its head at every opportunity of justifying that child-in pretense of "getting even," which seem-d to be obsessing me. I hesitated no longer and turned to Hugh with a smile

"After all, it isn't a trip to China we are contemplating," I said.

"I wish it were"

There words burst from him without volition. I knew, and the next instant he was bashing apologies.

"Please," he begged. Won't you consider that unsaid? I never meant to be so crass."

PHONING THE FARMHOUSE

I looked at him gravely, steadily

"I should like to take this drive with you," I told him, "and it will be far better for my purpose to see Avis Arlen in Patchogue than for you to bring her out here. But you must know that I cannot go if there is any chance of your repeating anything like that."

His eyes were also steady.

"I promise. You shall not again have cause for offense," he said

"Then I shall go, gladly," I said, "but first I must get Lilian on the wire, so that she can make excuses for me to any anxious relatives. I shall have her tell Dicky, of course, where I have gone," I added hastily, as I saw an unguarded query in his eyes, "but I do not wish his mother to know about it. Anything the least out of the ordinary upsets her dreadfully in these hectic days But I think she is safe in her own room now, taking a nap."

But I had reckoned without my doughty mother-in-law, for when Katie answered the telephone, there was another click, and Mother Graham's voice sounded excitedly from the upstairs telephone.

"Who is it? What is wanted?" she demanded.

SIMPLE TRICK FROM HOLLYWOOD BIDS GOODBYE TO SHINY NOSES

Smart Topcoat for Sports Frocks

ITS LINES are loose, yet not enough to disturb the slimness of your silhouette, the sleeves are wide enough to take a knitted sweater without a struggle, and the flaring revers make a nice contrast for the ascot—this little crocheted coat for which we offer you the directions today It makes a perfect addition to the assortment of sports cottons and linens everyone is going to have this season, and it may even top an evening gown of the more informal persuasion. Imagine how chic it would be with a brightly printed linen handkerchief tied cowboy fashion inside those revers, as a change from the ascot. If you would like directions for crocheting this coat, write Annice Brink, Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Frock Unbuttons at Neck Smart for Very Young

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9941

Yes—it really does unbutton at the neck so as to go on and off without a lot of trouble It's a frock for anything feminine from size ten to size eighteen—and any size looks prettier when wearing it For cottons it couldn't possible be nicer, with its long front panel and neat little pleats which make it smart and give its wearer plenty of room to get about gracefully. The belt is separate—and if you like it may be of plain color to match the buttons—repeating a shade in the print perhaps

Pattern 9941 may be ordered only in sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18 Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 36 inch fabric

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address the style, number and size of each pattern.

Send your order to Boston American Pattern Department, 232 W. 18th St., New York, N. Y.

Eyelet Frocks Are in Fashion

Captivating and completely feminine are the latest eyelet embroidered dresses. For the cocktail hour there is a new ankle length eyelet dress, in a clear light green, which has a soft organdy collar and an organdy jacket. A picture hat of cotton mesh and white kid pumps with green piping make this a glamorous ensemble. For daytime wear and for traveling, striking dark tones, such as brown, blue and bestroot, are shown with the eyelet embroidery done in white.

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

The word "ne" is the masculine form of the French "neé" meaning born—as "Emil Ludwig ne Cohn." The words are pronounced nay.

Pink of Baby Days Is Back

IF YOU used to be a little girl who delighted in strawberry ice cream and pink hair ribbons, you ought to be happy this season.

For pink is back with a bang as one of the most important colors for summer clothes.

Most women have cherished through the years a lingering fondness for the pink of their childhood party dresses—a fondness that often had to be suppressed in past years, when it was smart to dress in either vivid reds and greens, or uncompromising black

But fashion makes a bow to femininity this season

Sheer, crisp pink organdie dance frocks are shown in Fifth avenue shops, frothy as a raspberry ice cream soda.

Pink linen blouses, hats, handbags, collars and cuffs are being used to brighten up summer costumes.

And nothing could be more romantic and feminine than the new capes and boas of ruffled pink net, which are the last word in evening frivolity to add the good old glamour to after-dark dresses.

That plain, serviceable black evening gown you have been cherishing through the years will acquire new allure if you garnish it with a frothy pink net cape, and add a pair of pink chiffon gloves with frills of pink net for trimming

Dark lacquered straw cartwheel hats for summer are faced in pink satin once more.

And the Gibson girl's daughter is content.

Silk Now Looks Like Cotton

COTTON is causing such a fashion hullabaloo this summer that even silk is trying to hide its silk worm origin and disguise itself as cotton. The latest cotton copycat is seersucker silk, which duplicates the puckered surface of seersucker but has the advantage of being cooler and lighter in weight. Candy striped seersucker silk makes crisp shirtwaist frocks with pleated bosoms and ribbon ties and belts, for which matching crepe hats and pastel pumps are festive accessories.

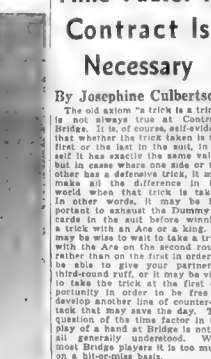
Time Factor in Contract Is Necessary

By Josephine Culbertson

The old axiom "a trick is a trick" is not always true at Contract Bridge. It is, of course, self-evident that whether the trick taken is the first or the last in the suit, in itself it has exactly the same value, but in cases where one side or the other has a defensive trick, it may make all the difference in the world when that trick is taken. In other words, it may be important to exhaust the Dummy of cards in the suit before winning a trick with an Ace or a king. It may be wise to wait to take a trick with the Ace on the second round rather than on the first in order to be able to give your partner a third-round ruff, or it may be vital to take the trick at the first opportunity in order to be free to develop another line of counter-attack that may save the day. The question of the time factor in the play of a hand at Bridge is not at all generally understood. With most Bridge players it is too much on a hit-or-miss basis.

The hand below, played in a Duplicate tournament of the United States Bridge Association, is an interesting example of the wisdom of deciding which trick you should take in a suit

West, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

West's Rebid of the spades was based upon the fact that he could not find any other good Rebid in the hand, and yet his hand was of such type that he wanted to play it for game, provided his partner displayed further interest. Obviously, East, in view of his partner's Opening bid, should show both of his five-card suits. When West later showed a preference for hearts as compared with clubs, it really meant that if a game was to be undertaken he felt that it was wiser to contract for ten tricks than eleven. East's bid of four hearts is stretching matters a little.

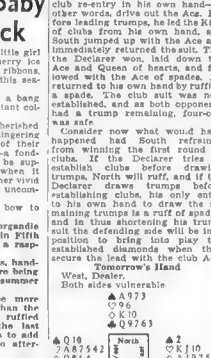
A diamond was opened, and North won the first two tricks. The third lead of that suit was ruffed by the Declarer. It was, of course, apparent to him that if he was to fulfill his contract he must be able to draw the adverse trumps in three rounds, and in order to accomplish this he must have a means of entering his own hand after winning the first two trump rounds with the Ace and Queen. An obvious entry would be to ruff a spade, but he had the Ace, but this would bring the closed hand's trump holding down to three, and he would cut down his tricks established when the trumps were gone.

Merely to analyze this line of play is to condemn it, so East adopted his other alternative—namely, an attempt to establish a club re-entry in his own hand—in other words, drive out the Ace. Before leading trumps, he led the King of clubs from his own hand, and South jumped in with the Ace and immediately returned the suit. This the Declarer won, laid down the Ace and Queen of hearts, and followed with the Ace of spades. He returned to his own hand by ruffing a spade. The setup was now established, and as both opponents had a trump remaining, four-odd was safe

Consider now what would have happened if South had refrained from winning the first round of clubs. If the Declarer tries to establish the diamonds when they trumps, North will ruff, and if the Declarer draws trumps before establishing clubs, his only entry to his own hand to draw the remaining trumps is a ruff of spades, and in thus shortening his trump suit the defending side will be in a position to bring into play the established diamonds when they secure the lead with the club Ace.

Tomorrow's Hand

West, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Eyes Made Larger By Shadow

Is there any way of improving the appearance of one's eyes? My eyelids are too thick and my eye lashes are not very heavy. Please tell me if there is any danger to the eyes in using a mild, salt-solution as an eye-wash. A. S. T., Lynn

A little eye shadow carefully applied will make your eyes appear larger. Start the shadow a little away from the nose and blend in well At night apply a little vaseline to your lashes with an eyebrow brush. It will make them thicker in time. A mild, salt solution is good for the eyes.

Coarse Skin

Question: I am 17 years old and my skin is oily and covered with blackheads and pimples. What foods may I eat in order to alleviate this condition? What general procedure should I follow? R. K., Brighton.

Answer: Since your skin is oily, watch your circulation and your diet. Wash your face at bedtime with warm water and a mild, pure soap, rinsing well in warm, then cold water. You can use cleaning cream to remove your makeup if you like, but wash afterward and don't leave cream on your skin all night, especially on the porous parts. Avoid sweets and all rich, fat, oily foods. Eat plentifully of green salads—lettuce, dandelions, tomatoes, onions, celery, cabbage and so on—and eat vegetables of all kinds. Drink lemonade and fruit juices of all kinds.

Freckle Bleach

Question: Will you please tell me how to use lemon for bleaching freckles on the face? I should like to know how much a girl 5 ft. tall and 19 years old should weigh. E. B., Medfield

Answer: A girl, 5 ft. tall, aged 19, should weigh about 112 pounds. To use lemon on the face to fade freckles, squeeze the juice and dilute with a little water or mix with cold cream and apply at night and in the morning, or whenever convenient. Use cream or soothing lotion before you go out in the sun and wind. Smooth it well over face, neck, hands and arms. Leave on a few moments, remove with tissues and dust with powder. This will help prevent more freckles from appearing. Tomato juice and butter milk are also effective.

Coco Butter Massage

Question: In proportion to the rest of my legs, my thighs are quite thin, particularly the inner part. Is there any exercise or massage that would help them? Miss Quiet

Answer: Try rubbing coco butter or toilet lanolins into the thighs and legs. Follow this with a five-minute massage. There is a new massager on the market that is wonderful for both building up and reducing the legs If you are interested to learn the name of this product send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me.

Hip Development

I would like to enlarge my hip measurement. Can I do this by using massage cream?. A. M. B., Milton.

If I were you I would not try to enlarge my hips. It seems to me that you are rather fortunate in having a slender form. It is all right to use massage cream to fill out hollows. Cocoa butter or toilet lanolin are said to be effective for this purpose. They may be obtained at any drug store.

Personal Note Pleases All

By Mrs. Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A baby shower was given for me the other day, and I received beautiful gifts from 30 people who were generous enough to bring them individually as I opened every package.

I would like to know if I should send them "thank you" cards by mail also, or was thanking them personally enough?

To acknowledge such graciousness and generosity I would like to have you write a note of appreciation to every one of these kind friends. It isn't quite enough, I think, to thank them at the shower. And please, please don't send them the ready-made "Thank you" cards. These are never in good form, since they suggest that we are unwilling to express our thanks in our own words. The charmingly-written personal note is the thing to do.

Surest Way to Poise Is to Keep a Dull, Mat Surface All Through the Day

From Hollywood, land of glamour and allure, comes a make-up hint that will be avidly seized by lovely ladies everywhere. It's a new way to prevent a shiny nose in the summertime, and it's so ridiculously simple that stars and extras in the studios have adopted it with gusto. With this secret you can now look as dainty and lovely as June Vlasek, rising young star.

By Juliet Shelby

YOU CANNOT MAKE THE WAVES turn back, nor rule the course of the sun so that it will no longer shine—but you can prevent a shiny nose. Your's may perform its duty faithfully and without complaint, bless it; but if it shines radiantly in the light of day, like a beacon on your face, you'll be diving into your vanity a thousand times a day.

If you want to show a nice, dull-finished nose to the world, you'll adopt an unusual make-up trick which Hollywood discovered recently. When you go motoring, golfing, or to the beach you'll no longer dread looking into the mirror for fear of discovering that the summer's sun has stolen away your loveliness.

To see the modern woman fiddle with her powder puff before her dressing-table mirror, you would think her nose would never shine again. But the dressing-table is a deceiving thing.

A famous screen star, who is always meticulously groomed, even on "location" beneath a broiling sun, found that her complexion remained delicate and fresh as a flower petal after trying out this new make-up.

It's a ridiculously simple process—this business of keeping your nose velvety and dull. And if your chin and cheeks have a tendency towards oiliness and shine, this same process will work wonders

If you are troubled with an extremely oily or red nose, it is well to avoid eating too much fried food, highly seasoned or spicy ones, rich gravies, sauces, etc., and very hot or cold drinks. Extreme redness of the nose or entire face often comes from faulty digestion, faulty circulation, or exposing the skin to extremes heat or cold for a long period of time.

If you cannot discover the cause yourself, it is well to have a physical examination and get a few words of advice from your doctor. Avoid wearing extremely tight, binding clothes, and stir up your sluggish circulation by brisk walks and a few minutes of vigorous outdoor exercises daily.

When your nose, forehead or entire face tends to become extremely shiny or red, use plenty of soap and warm water several times daily. After rinsing off every trace of soap, dash on cold water before drying your skin. Plain cold water has excellent stimulating, toning and astringent properties. Then apply your favorite astringent or skin tonic to your face and neck, and help slow down the tiny over-active oil glands.

Don't be afraid of letting the summer's sun steal away your beauty, nor fear that the winds will ravage your most careful make-up. If you know that your nose is dull and smooth, you will be very sure of yourself under all climatic conditions this year. Follow this method which is now generally adopted by picture stars on both the East and West coasts.

If you are interested in learning this clever make-up trick to prevent a shiny nose and the causes of several excellent preparations which may be used as a powder base on a red or shiny nose, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Juliet Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston, for this information

GIRL IN THE FAMILY -:- A Choice Between Marriage for Love or Loyalty -:- By Beatrice Burton

Susan Sees New Problem as John Decides to Accept Job on Omaha Newspaper

CHAPTER XXII

He went on telling her how he had worked his way through his freshman and sophomore years at college, waiting on the table in his fraternity house and working in a bookstore afternoons and evenings, and providing for his mother who had spent the last three years of her life in a sanitarium on the desert.

"I've always been able to make money," he said, not boastfully but in the level voice in which people usually make flat truthful statements. "And I know I'll be able to take good care of you, Susan as soon as I've passed the doggone bar examinations."

"Well, then, everything's settled and there's nothing for us to argue about anymore," Susan answered eagerly. You look after your career for a few months and I'll manage Wallace and the family—and let's not have any more misunderstandings."

They stopped, moved by a common impulse in the shadow of a tree that was between the sidewalk and the road and kissed each other. It seemed to Susan, as their lips met, that everything was clear as crystal between them once more, and she walked into the house a half hour, later humming "The Waters of Minnetonka," under her breath and feeling that, when the time came to make the break with Wallace and tell the family about it, she would be ready for it.

ANNA FEELS GAY

Early that afternoon Herbst, in a derby hat and a long black overcoat that made him look like a stranger, came driving into the Broderick's yard and stopped his milk truck at the foot of the back steps.

On the porch stood the two small yellow trunks that Anna had brought with her to the Broderick house years before. On the top of one of them was a round hard cloth-covered ball as large as a young watermelon. It was covered with dangling wooden bobbins, and fastened to it with steel pins was a short length of shell-patterned lace. Anna called it her "lace pillow," and she had told Susan that she had made it out of scraps of cloth when she was a little girl in the "old country." Her cheap cotton umbrella stood against the trunk, and two large framed photographs were propped against it, a large colored portrait of Herbst and a photograph of his sister's wedding party, taken a year before. Anna was in the picture, smiling broadly and happily, one large hand on Herbst's shoulder and the other one holding a perfectly round bouquet of flowers.

All of these things Herbst and John, who came out to help him, carried down the steps and put into the back of the milk truck while Susan stood on the porch, holding Anna's two pots of Boston ferns, carefully wrapped in newspaper, that Anna was taking with her to Herbst's house where she intended to stay until she found another place as housemaid.

"Maybe we get marry," she had said to Susan that morning as she washed the last breakfast dishes she would ever wash in the Broderick's kitchen. "Herbst say we sure do if I cannot find a job."

She had seemed to be very cheerful all day and had made a pan of cabbage leaf rolls, for which she would never give anyone the recipe and a devil's food cake for John who was extremely fond of it, and Susan had heard her whistling to herself in the kitchen as she peeled the potatoes for Sunday dinner.

But Anna was very pink and there were traces of tears on her face when she came down to the kitchen in her best clothes, a suit of bright blue cloth, trimmed with dabs of dyed brown fur. However, her smile was as wide as usual as she kissed Susan and John goodbye.

"I was going to say goodbye to Mrs. Broderick and Miss Lutie, but they are asleep like always on Sunday afternoon," she said to Susan, climbing into the truck beside Herbst. "Goodbye, I come soon and bring you some coffee kuchen"

ROOM SEEMS EMPTY

Then, just as the truck was starting away making a noise like a threshing machine, she leaned out from the seat and called loudly to John above the noise

"John' Mister John! I leave your goose grease by your room for you!" Every year she filled a jar with a mixture of turpetine and grease from the New Year's roast goose and put it carefully away for John to rub on his chest if he should have a recurrence of the bronchitis that he had had every winter when he was growing up.

"Goodbye," she called again and waved her cotton umbrella at them in farewell until the truck vanished beyond the shoe fixery on the corner, and Susan and John went back into the kitchen which she had left swept and shining as usual. It had always been the most cheerful room in the house, with Anna's crochet work on the shelf beside the clock and her potato vine growing in a pot on the window sill above the sink. There had always been the sound of her voice humming as she worked, and there had been her love affair with Herbst to talk over. The room seemed very empty now without her, and the ticking of the clock and the sudden click of sleet against the windows had a melancholy sound.

"It's going to seem mighty funny around here without Anna, isn't it?" John seated himself on a corner of the kitchen table and pulled his pipe from his pocket. "Gosh, I though the folks would hang on to her till the bitter end, whether they paid her or not" Susan, remember how she used to warm our coats and leggings here in front of the stove when we were going to school on cold mornings?"

"And how she used to put pennies in our lunch boxes sometimes so we could buy waffles from the man who drove past the school yard at noon?" Susan said. "Remember?"

"She's a swell gal." John spoke with a sudden brisk heartiness as if he were afraid of becoming too sentimental over her departure. If there was anything that he abominated it was what he called "sloppiness" in any form, and he often preached small alangy sermons to Susan on the importance of keeping one's mind as hard and fit as one's body

"It's probably a good thing for her that she's lost this job," he remarked, pouring tobacco into the bowl of his pipe and pressing it down with his thumb "She'll marry Herbst now and live happily ever after, helping Herbst with his dairy business."

He got up from the table, crossed the kitchen and carefully closed the door that led to the dining room.

"Susie," he said, "I have a chance to go out to Omaha."

JOB IN OMAHA

"Omaha?" Susan's eyes stared at him blankly. "Omoha . . . What would you go there for?" . . . Omaha sounded as remote as Calcutta to her

"To be assistant sports editor on a newspaper out there. A paper that belongs to Colonel Parsons," John explained. "He has a string of six or seven papers, and every now and then he shifts people around from one to another of them. He wants me and Gowen to go out to the Omaha paper to take charge of the sports desk at the end of this week."

"At the end of this week?"

"Yes. Gowen said he'd go, and I feel pretty sure I will, too. Parsons gets sore at people if they don't do what he wants them to."

Susan had never seen Colonel Parsons, and she had met Gowen, the sporting editor of The Express only once

"Do you want to go?" she asked him with difficulty because a large dry lump had come up into her throat and was sticking there. But while she asked the question she knew that he did want to go. She could see the light of adventure in his face as he turned it toward the window and looked out into the gray sleet that filled the air. For trying new things John had always taken the cake," as Lutie put it "I'll be twenty-seven next spring phase

"Sure I'm going to. The salary will be fifty a week, and if I make good, Connie and I can get married in the spring."

"You've told her about it?"

He nodded and grinned "Yes, and she's all for getting married right away and going out there with me She has some money of her own and she says she's going to start a lending library out there and make some money too." Susan saw him smile to himself at the thought of Connie's business enterprise.

"John," she said, "Dad will be back soon. He'll pay the family whatever I owe them for my board here—and I don't want you to do anything more about it. With you one and Dad gone and Anna gone the household expenses here ought to be next to nothing. I can't bear the thought of letting you support me when I know you'd like to marry Connie now and take her with you."

Of Kate Greenaway Inspiration

A HUGE COLLAR of white embroidered organdie cut on square, quaint lines and a neckline modestly filled in and topped by flowers under the chin, are more than a little reminiscent of Kate Greenaway frocks. Frances Drake wears this frock with a great deal of dash. For the bridesmaid at the picturesque type of wedding it would be exciting, and certainly it would cut a devastating figure on the dance floor, with its fitted sheath and ruching-topped flares.

Breakfast for the New June Bride

June, the month of brides, always brings a great many questions about weddings and wedding receptions. In deciding what is to be served for such an affair the number of people invited and the facilities for serving should be taken into consideration

The wedding table should be set with dignified simplicity A lace or white damask cloth, choice china, clear crystal and gleaming silver blend pleasantly with wedding colors

For pretty individual favors, place above each service plate a small white box bearing the initials of the bride and groom and tied with a fluffy white ribbon Each guest who puts a piece of the cake in this box to sleep on will have prophetic dreams Most important, though, is the quality of the wedding breakfast that starts the young couple on their way. The menus and recipes for this important occasion must be of memorable quality such as these suggested below

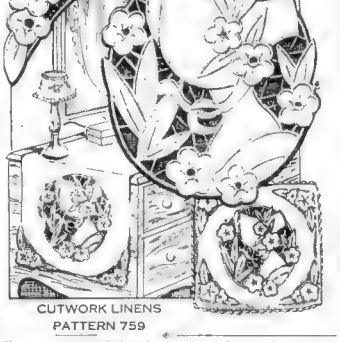
Unusual Cutwork Pattern



CUTWORK LINENS

PATTERN 759

Here are some motifs in cutwork that besides being quaint are simple to do and most striking. They match the design of the cutwork bedspread motifs pattern 742 given a few weeks ago, only being somewhat smaller. They can be used on doilies, vanity sets, pillows and other linens, the oval motif as well as the corners being effective alone as well as together. Like the larger motifs of pattern 742 they are lovely done in white or color on a pastel colored linen

Pattern 759 comes to you with a transfer pattern of two motifs 9x9¼ inches and two and two reverse 4 inch corners; complete directions for doing cutwork, illustrations of the stitches and material requirements.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to Boston Evening American Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y.

Summer Skin Diseases

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D

During the summer months many persons become afflicted with disorders and inflammation. I am sure that in most instances these disturbances could be prevented if proper precautions were taken.

For example, "impetigo contagiosa" is a contagious and inflammatory disease of the skin, is frequently encountered during the summer. Though it ordinary affects children, it is sometimes seen sometimes in adults. It is caused by a germ that readily spreads from one individual to another

The disease is transmitted by infected dogs and cats. During the warm weather the condition is common in schools, camps, beaches and summer resorts where proper sanitary measures are lacking. Since the disease is highly contagious, the victim of impetigo contagiosa should be isolated from other children and adults. Care should be taken so that the infection is not spread by soiled towels, clothes and eating utensils.

"Ringworm", or "athlete's foot", is another common skin infection. This disease is especially prevalent at beaches and summer resorts where people walk about without shoes or slippers. Often it can be traced to contaminated water in large public swimming

Skin rashes in individuals sensitive to certain foods are more often seen during the summer months than in cold weather. After eating certain things, such as sea food tomatoes or berries, the skin may begin to itch and become inflamed

As a rule, this is due to a sensitivity to specific substances. These substances are usually proteins found in certain foods. The sufferer obtains relief by avoiding these foods, especially during warm weather.

Chapter XXXI

I was always a great one for figures and as naturally I have spent a great deal of time getting up statistics for the Better America Federation. I guess I am the only man alive who can tell you how much time is wasted annually by wage slaves who take both hands to tie their shoe laces during working hours. The economic loss to big business exceeds that of the damage wrought by rodents who destroy more than $[illegible],000,000 worth of I don't-know-what-all annually.

Let me give you an example of what I mean. Suppose a skilled worker discovers that his shoe lace is untied. He drops everything to tie it. Often it breaks. Not the shoe-lace—but everything. A shoe-string that can be laced with one hand and does not need to be tied is, I contend, the solution of our industrial problem. I have invented such a shoelace. The question that now arises, is, "America, what are you going to do about it?" I pause for a reply

An Essay on Dirty Work; Dempsey Tutors Baer in the Fine Art

Prospect Is for An Exchange of Sly Savagery on Thursday

By AUSTEN LAKE

THE GARRULOUS COMPANY of all night sitters who are following the laboratory work of Max Baer, concedes that the overlay of silly nonsense with which he glosses his training hides an sinister a killer's heart as exists in the prize fight industry today.

Austen Lake

The man with the merry, jaw-splitting grin and the slap stick manner of a happy boy is accomplished in the fine arts of dirty work as no other ring fighter since the time of Jack Dempsey.

And the all night sitters agree that he is polishing rabbit wallops, heeling, thumbing and such like knacks of which the human fist, elbow and skull is master, in private sessions with Dempsey, who is master of the science of dirty work and whose ring record is strewn with the seven mortal furies.

It is history that only one referee has yet been spunky enough to disqualify a fighter in a heavyweight championship bout for foul tactics, and that when Jack Sharkey slugged Max Schmeling into the world title with a spank on the groin.

I AM THINKING of the June night last year when Baer was chivvying Max Schmeling with free style thumb jabs to the eyes and underslung blows that rained off his foul-proof armour. So that Baer was warned and rewarned by Referee Art Donovan, who wheeled around the ring like a male Zazu Pitts, ringing hands and puckering his brows in a lather of uncertainty.

And then finally when Schmeling was standing in a helpless daze with his back turned and arms hanging limply at his sides, Baer glided up like a panther with his right arm cocked for a lethal smash at the base of the skull.

There was no clownishness in the savage curl of his lips or in the bead of white light in his slit eyes at the moment when Dono van leaped to grab the arm and save what might have been death in the making.

Baer's Ring History Belies His Comic Character

IT WAS BAER, the slap-stick comedian, who killed Frankie Campbell on the Pacific Coast in August of 1930 in a bout that was for the regional title. And it was Baer who is credited with delivering the brain injury to Ernie Schaaf which brought about his death later at the hands of Primo Carnera.

On August 31 of 1932 in Chicago, Baer hammered Schaaf in sensable eight seconds before the final bell. And, while Ernie did not recover consciousness for nearly three hours after the fight, he was saved the ignominy of being knocked out on the records. Yet thereafter he never fought a creditable battle again up to the moment Carnera sledged him down five months later with an overhand blow like that used in the stock yards abbatoirs to kill beef cattle

NOW THERE IS no room for squeamishness in a sport that has its roots in the human jungles and the primitive fury of the apes. And I am looking forward to seeing Carnera stamp down his huge feet on the insteps of the challenger and to see Baer whip the laces of his gloves across the big man's features and otherwise gouge and elbow his thick features to a bloody pulp

Why, you don't think that the customers are paying a $25 top, or $100 at scalpers' rates, to witness a ballroom go between two society tap dancers? Sweet, clean blows and neat counters are routine matters that may be viewed in any cave of the wind training gymnasium at a quarter a peek.

The mob pays to be horrified and goes to a prize fight to see one or more sleek human animals, trained to a ripple of muscle, hurt if fortune is kind. And I do not think that the man who sits on the ringside slopes, chewing the soggy end of a dead cigar or the lady who munches salt water taffy and sucks lizarettes, are dainty about the sight of blood or fastidious about the ring methods which release it.

Dempsey Capable Tutor in Art of Monkey Business

THE PUBLIC DESERVES full viciousness for its money, which was why Dempsey, who is Baer's governess in the cordial surroundings of the Asbury training camp, was reckoned the most popular figure in the ennobling sport.

Dempsey never compromised with crude violence. He stood over Angel Firpo's kneeling figure and knocked him loose from his bridgework as he attempted to rise. He sunk his gloves up to the wrist in Jack Sharkey's abdomen. He knocked out Bill Brennan with a rabbit punch.

In fact anything between the scalp and the knees was fair territory to the man who is now tutoring Max Baer.

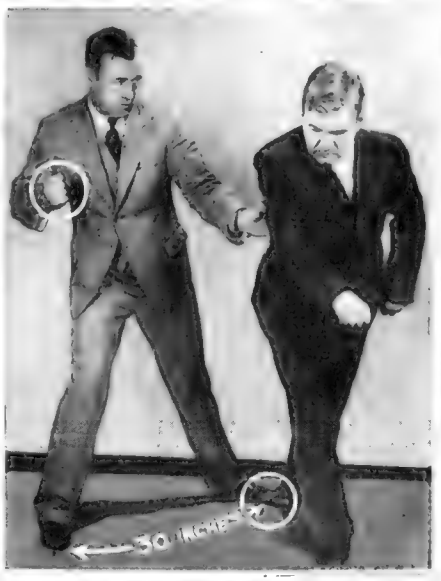
And don't forget that Baer has a longer reach that Carnera, having 81 inches against the latter's 80.

There is something pathetically funny about the public's eagerness to lay hard won money on the window sills of the Garden a bowl to witness a brawl between two bankrupt clowns who have less of the old-fashioned ring finish than a pair of alley scrappers.

But nowadays there is no worse bore in the show business, of which fighting is an offshoot, than to bill a championship match as a boxing contest, replete with technical perfection of the parry and thrust. It implies an absence of savagery and calculated dirty work.

And I think a promoter could sue you for that.

Sharkey Explains How Primo's Stride Is Real Factor in Title Bout



BODY ATTACK IS BAER'S PLAN IN TITLE GO

By Max Baer

A [illegible] and I and all the rest of us have been told that it is just a waste of energy to toss punches at Primo Carnera's body. Well I don't know about you, but I don't b[illegible] and when I [illegible] against our daring champion, I m goin gto try to drill holes through his ribs and make his stomach play tag with his backbone.

Oh, sure, I know plenty of fighters have hit him there and didn't damage him. But I'm another kind of [illegible] and, when I blast away, every ounce that belongs to me goes into that punch.

MAX HAS ADVANTAGE

I have a budget [illegible] Carnera. Oh, to his 80 inches!—and that is [illegible] opponents ever had. All the other boys had to crowd in pretty close to "Preem" to get a shot at him—and that was to the Big Boy's advantage. But I can stand off and [illegible]

I'm [illegible] With the [illegible] just one [illegible] eats he [illegible] stop pop[illegible] I'm [illegible] of the word.

There'll be lots of action and you ought to come on up and see me tattoo my initials on the body of our darling champion whose job expires sometime during the evening of June 14th.

I'm young and strong and tough, nobody ever had me on the floor [illegible] Max Schmeling, Paulino Uzcudun and Max Schaaf, Levinsky and Schmeling weren't sickly people. They were extra special good men when I fought them

HEAVY ACTION

Primo [illegible] knows that I can do [illegible] with my fists than anybody he'll ever faced. He doesn't like a lathering and he knows he's in for lots of it. That's what made him so nervous and gloomy up at his Pompion Lakes camp

CARNERA'S SIZE 22 BROGANS—THEY HURT WHEN THEY CRUNCH ON YOUR TOOTSIES

Alp's Size 22 Shoes Are Anchors for Luckless Foe, Says Sharkey

By Jack Conway

Jack Sharkey was Primo Carnera, and I was Max Baer. So any way you figured it, I had the worst of it

Sharkey was giving a demonstration of how Carnera would walk all [illegible]

"I don't think Carnera intentionally steps on an opponent's feet," said Sharkey. "He does it because he takes twice as large a stride as the ordinary boxer.

"If I tried to take as large a stride as Carnera, I couldn't punch Carnera flounders forward like this."

OH, THERE'S A TRICK

Sharkey then stepped on my left foot, knocked [illegible] and let a club-like right-hand punch breeze past my jaw

"I can do the same thing, using a left hand," went on the former champion. "The real trick, though, is to step on your left foot, spin you by turning you at the elbow, and then crashing you on the jaw while you are off balance, and while I still have your left foot pinned."

Sharkey talked about Carnera's huge feet.

"They are No. 22a," he said. "The fellow has ankles that remind me of the hoofs of a horse. I never had trouble in spinning an opponent until I met Carnera. I had fought Wills, Godfrey, Dempsey, Schmeling and some other pretty big men

"When I wanted to prevent them from hitting me, I would seize their elbows, and spin them to one side or the other. The average boxer is thrown off balance quickly

ALP WON'T BUDGE

"I tried to spin Carnera but it was much the same as if I tried to move the State House. It couldn't be done. So I had to fight him head on all the time.

"Carnera is so big you have to throw your punches up at him. It is difficult to hurt a man under such conditions. One must be hitting down or at least on the line to get the most power behind blows."

Sharkey does not believe any man in the world can beat "Satchel Feet." Not even Baer.

Baer won't run as much as Loughran did and Carnera will find it easier to hit him," said Sharkey. Primo is a better boxer [illegible] but people give him credit for being while nobody [illegible] with him."

ALP IS SURE MAX WILL FAIL IN CROWN BID

By Primo Carnera

Pompion Lakes, N. J., June 12—Since coming to Pompion I have been taking things easy, centering on boxing. I was in such splendid condition that I did not need [illegible]

This year I have directed much of my training myself. I know something about boxing and have made a study of my opponents. I believe I know now to beat them once I have seen them in the ring and know their plan of attack and defense.

ALP UNHURT BY BLOWS

I believe I know how to defeat Baer, and I have been working along these lines. My morning [illegible] hills has been more of a relaxation than anything else. We go out early and get the fresh air, walk and run until we are tired, work up an appetite and then back to camp for breakfast. And how wonderful these hikes are for your wind.

As to the rest of training routine [illegible] the lawn of the camp, most of the [illegible] in the sun. When the afternoon work comes I go into the ring with my sparring partners. I personally direct them to shoot at me with all their might and speed the punches I believe that Baer will have never been hurt in the least, and my gameness are the biggest and cleverest men I can get.

HAS FAITH IN SELF

I [illegible] more trouble to Baer than it was [illegible] Loughran last Feb[illegible] and I [illegible] October [illegible] type of [illegible] can box with best. Of course my friend (and mine, too)—Jack Dempsey—may teach him to duck and weave, but a long stabbing left and a good right uppercut can solve that, I believe.

I have trained tirelessly and with a system which I have tried to explain: Proper food, plenty of sleep [illegible] of hiking for the wind hoping to keep me on edge for the real battle, and much heavy bag punching to harden the hands and develop the biceps. I am sure I can hit with great force now

The Maine woods helped me, the Pompion Lakes camp put on the finishing touches. I am ready for the fight of my life.

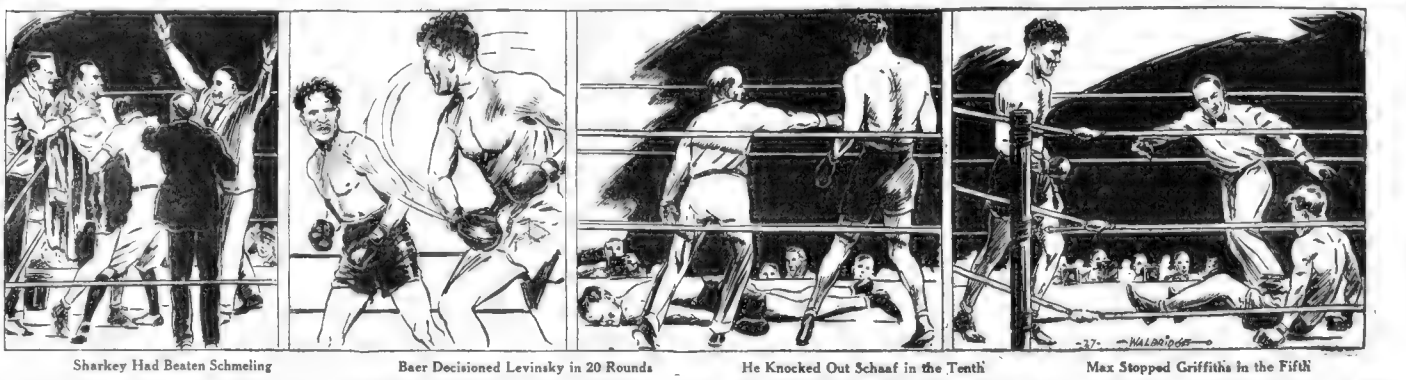
Life of Max Baer



Sharkey Had Beaten Schmeling

One could still get a divorce in six weeks in Reno, but action at gaming tables had slowed to a walk by the summer of 1932. The same croupiers who were raking in dollars at the time of the Uzcudun-Baer fight, were now selling stacks at five and ten cents a chip—and glad to get it. The slump at Reno's gaming tables may have been the reason for the second invitation by Bill Graham and Jim McKay to Jack Dempsey to pepper up the city with another big fight.

Dempsey shopped around. In June Schmeling had lost the championship to Jack Sharkey, but Der Maxie "thumbed down" a chance for a comeback against Baer in Reno. But King Levinsky, the Chicago "personality kid," always aiming to please, accompanied by "Leaping Lena" Levy, his sister-manager and Sam Gan, now co-manager of Barney Ross, came to Reno and signed for a 20 round fight with Baer.

Dempsey wanted to run another "everything goes" fight, but the king over-ruled a few of the rules, including head-butts and rabbit punches that had prevailed in the Uzcudun-Baer battle. The second battle of Reno was no Gettysburg. At the end of 2 tedious rounds Baer had his hand raised.

As a money-maker it was a bust. Reno is probably through promoting fights for a while.

Ancil Hoffman and Baer returned east. At Chicago Baer was matched with Ernie Schaaf, the man first to defeat him in the east. The fight was tug and haul until the tenth when Baer lashed out with a volley of punches and knocked Schaaf cold. Schaaf was to die following the knockout at the hands of Primo Carnera in New York. Critics since have opined Max Baer's punches really started the finish of the unfortunate Schaaf.

The Tuffy Griffiths fight at Chicago followed on September 26, 1932. Tuffy was no match. In the fifth the referee warned Max to hustle. Max knocked Griffiths out.

GOOSE'S HONKS BRING JOY TO TIGERS

By Dave Egan

Last Winter, when Mickey Cochrane traded young Goose Stoner for Goose Goslin, a rusty jackknife and a few salted peanuts which had been stored in his left shoe, there was a sad shaking of heads.

The rash Mr. Frick might do for opening cans.

Each spring, jaded or not, baseball always is treated to the tribe known as baseball writers for their pitch-them-a-line-and-I'll-have-one-of-mother's-both-dreary-in-one-and-dull-in-none.

But Goose Goslin.

"Pop-eyed Willie Kamm" was unthinkable to the springtime young man who, having served only six years in the big show, first saw the light of day when Dad was a rookie.

The hoods of the Detroit customers could be heard reverberating over Lake Michigan, and they increased to a clamorous crescendo when the Goose, late in April, hit into four double plays in four times at bat.

But then the Goose started honking in the May air.

The goose down in Nova Scotia are said to fly backwards, in order to see where they have been. The Goose flew backwards for a moment, observed that he was hitting the size of his collar, and then he stepped out.

Now he is batting for .320, in round numbers, and he is one of the leading factors in the rush which has put the Tigers in first place in the American League standing.

When Goslin started to climb, Cochrane started the climb with him. This was a very vital matter for they bat three-four, as the ball players say, and when the Stoner athletes in the clean-up position are not batting, a team cannot win consistently.

Mickey is batting close to .290 up to this day and date, and he and the Goose expect to get back to the Red Sox pitching staff.

Stanley Harris is delightful with the progress of the team so far leads him also to the belief that the affair in the Motor City is not a fad gamble.

The standing is puckered up like the face of a boy who has just eaten a quince. There are only small spaces between the wrinkles.

Anything can happen in the mad-dest pell-mell American League has known for many years.

The Civil War, not between the North and the South this time, but between the East and West, starts today, with the Eastern teams in the American League playing at home against the Westerners, and vice versa.

Gabby Hartnett has dropped only two foul flies in his major league career, but don't ask us to prove it.

Jimmy Shevlin, former Holy Cross first baseman who was out of the game last year with a leg injury, has been working out with the Cincy Reds, and expects to get back into the game soon.

Arthur Skinny Graham, of Somerville, playing for Reading in the New York-Penn League, is batting .371.

$200,000 Advance on Title Go

By Damon Runyon

(Copyright, 1934, by Distributed by Universal Service, Inc.)

New York, June 11—Colonel Ted Reed Kilpatrick, head of Madison Square Garden Information, the writer that the advance sale for the Carnera-Baer fight is now over $200,000, cash.

With three days to go, this indicates a total gate of between $600 and $800,000, which, pro-[illegible] would be the times in earth [illegible] of something like $1 [illegible] in the days of the g'ld [illegible].

The [illegible] of postponement originating in the Max Baer camp as a mistaken idea of bashful, undoubtedly hurt the sale, slowing it up almost to a dead stop just as it has commenced to "roll." It has taken on new impetus, however, and the next 72 hours will see old time activity at the box office windows.

As a spectacle, at least, the Carnera-Baer affair is the best thing that has been offered the fistic fans in years.

Max Baer's airy attitude toward the coming fight, his disposition to clown and big and show off has the experts greatly puzzled. He never before seen a challenger just like him on the eve of a world's championship contest.

Hartford Sells 4 Players to Phils

Hartford, Ct., June 12 (INS)—Bill Lohrman, youthful right-handed pitcher picked up early this season by Bill Morrell of the Hartford Senators, last night was reported sold to the Philadelphia National for cash, Howard McCaffery, also a right-handed pitcher, and two unnamed outfielders.

The amount of cash involved was not disclosed. Lohrman, who pitched last year in the Mississippi-Valley, is a good hitter and won four out of five games for the Senators.

DEVINE STOPS VILLA IN 6TH AT SALEM

Salem, June 12—Harry Devine of Worcester, 141, is still welter champion of New England. The conqueror of Werther Arcelli retained the title here when he stopped Puzzled Pancho Villa 140, of New Bedford in the sixth round of a 12-round bout.

Devine had the better of a furious fought first and second rounds but Villa came back to win the third stinging the champ repeatedly with hard right hand punches.

Devine won the fourth and fifth, and dropped Villa for an eight count early in the sixth. Springing to the attack like a panther, Devine soon had his antagonist in a bad way, and Referee Watson stopped the fray when Villa seemed unable to defend himself.

In a 6-round semifinal, Norman Conrad of Wilton, N. H., outpointed Tony Costa of New Bedford.

Providence—Lou Brouillard, 148½, Worcester, knocked out Henry Firpo, 150, Louisville, Ky., six rounds.

West Springfield—Coco Rio, 143, New Haven, substituting for Joey Ferrando, Jersey City, won unanimous decision from Steve Halaiko, 138½, Buffalo.

Paris—Marcel Thil, France, 162, world middleweight title claimant, stopped Adolf Witt, 171, Germany, eight rounds; Technical knockout.

Birmingham, Eng.—Harry Mason, 145½, London, defeated Len (Tiger) Smith, 144, Birmingham, final (16), retained British featherweight title.

Miami—Joe Knight, 178, Cairo, Ga., stopped Pete Brazil, 185, Ecuador, two rounds.

Jersey City, N. J.—Joey Ferrando, 142, Bayonne, outpointed Jimmy Hawkins, 138, New York (10).

Worcester—Leo Bromiard, Worcester, knocked out Henry Firpo, Louisville, Ky., (6).

New Orleans—Willard Brown, 145, Indianapolis, stopped Battling Shaw, 145½, Laredo, Tex. (10).

Tampa, Fla.—Eddie Firpo, 151, Tampa, outpointed Lupe Guerra, 148, Philippines (10); Young Zumbery, 147, Tampa, stopped Jimmy Berg, 143, Ybor City, Fla. (3).

Paris—Marcel Thil, 162, European light-heavyweight champion of France, defeated Adolf Witt, 174, Germany (8).

All-Scholastic Nine Named Tomorrow

All-Scholastic baseball honors for the season now ending are announced in tomorrow's Boston Evening American sports pages. The All-School nine is selected by Bill Connell, Boston American sports staff writer.

Players for the team have been chosen only after long drawn out surveys of the season's averages at field and at bat, of caliber of opposition faced, and number of games played.

Eligible for the team before the selection was made were players from schools of Greater Boston, and from those teams not too far outside this district which have played a majority of their games among the Greater Boston teams.

The team represents the finest baseball talent available among the schoolboys, selected with all the care possible after consultations with coaches from many schools.

Years of All-Scholastic teams selected without partiality, without neglect of any district, and with a view to naming the strongest team which could be possibly assembled have made the Boston Evening American selections respected among schoolboys and their followers.

Don't miss this outstanding feature, in tomorrow's Boston Evening American sports pages.

GREEN ACE TO JOIN YANKEES

By International News Service

Hanover, N. H., June 12—Big Bob Miller, Dartmouth's pitching ace, today was scheduled to join the New York Yankees as soon as his college hurling days are over, which is next week. He is anxious to hurl the big Green to two more victories and put them in a tie with Columbia for the eastern college title.

Miller has not signed with the Yankees, because it would automatically render him ineligible for further college competition, but he has an understanding with the Yanks to sign as soon as the college season is completed.

His best performances this year was his no-hit, no-run game in the opening tilt of a double-header at Philadelphia, and then returning for the second game to defeat the Quakers again.

H. C. NINE WINS RUBBER GAME

Led by the opening home run of Ed Moriarty in his tenth inning, scoring Jim Canty ahead of him, the Holy Cross nine won its second game with Boston College, 2-1, and copped the series before an Alumni Day crowd of 5000 at Chestnut Hill.

Long Joe Mulligan, on the hill for the Purple, was master of the situation in all but two frames while the Eagles were forced to use three twirlers. Bob Duffy, who came out in the sixth with the score 7-4 against him, was succeeded by Lefty Mackey.

Lefty saw his team mates even up the tally to 7 all in the last of the ninth as well placed singles and a pair of passes sent Concannon, Curran and Mahoney across the plate.

Harry Lane, who went on the mound in the first of the ninth, was nicked for the teling Moriarty homer.

Lowell vs. Rosebuds

The league leading Lowell club of the Northeastern circuit plays the Worcester Rosebuds at League Park, Worcester, in the feature contest booked for tonight.

URBANSKI ILL, BERGER MAY GO TO INFIELD

By Joe Cashman

St. Louis, June 12—Sight of this mid-Western arid area, which will harbor them for the next sixteen days, brought loud sheurs of joy from our Braves.

The weather may be hot and the opposition hotter out here but, to the Warriors' eyes, these parched plains are paradise compared to the Atlantic's cool coast south of Boston.

And why not? They have a season's record in the wide open spaces of six victories in eleven games by far the best showing of any eastern entry. In New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia, on the other hand, they've won only four out of fourteen.

Time may prove them greatly in error, but the Tribesmen will tell you as they enter a four-game series with the second place Cardinals this afternoon, that they'll gallop through this neck of the woods at a faster clip than on their first swing.

It's quite evident, listening to their optimistic chirping, that they firmly believe they've recovered from their recent collapse and have forgotten all about it.

They have pretty badly shot, both mentally and physically, before the final game in Brooklyn. That thrilling Sunday victory restored their faith in themselves. At least the closing chapters of that tilt did much toward that end. Left in the hands of the pitchers. The boys are hitting as well as ever, and the fielding is up to par whenever the same can be said of the flinging.

Brandt, Cantwell, Frankhouse or Betts has got shown winning form since leaving the Wigwam. They figure to get better for no other reason that they can't get worse.

Freddie Frankhouse will make his second attempt to chalk up his ninth triumph of the season in the opener against the Cards. He tried to gain it at the Giants' expense last week but was knocked from the box after going into the seventh with a 5-1 lead.

Frankhouse has beaten the Red Birds twice in as many starts this year but finished neither game. He hurt his arm after blanking them for eight innings here, and was hit in the leg and forced to retire in the sixth inning at Boston. Tesas two games, incidentally, represent the Braves' only victories in six games with the Fritch family.

Nobody enjoyed the Monday rest more than Barber Bill Urbanski. The league's best shortstop has been suffering intense pain from a "charley horse" since the 16-inning game with the Dodgers at the Wigwam. He wouldn't be playing if there were anybody around who could come close to spelling him.

If worst comes to worst and Urbanski is forced to quit for a few days, Berger will be tried at short. Wally works out at the berth in practice daily and shaped up as the best sub for the spot.

Hurley Real Threat to N. E. Senior Golf Title

By Bill Grimes

Among the early starters in the 13th annual N. E. Senior Golfers' Association who played today at the Woodland Golf Club was Postmaster William E. Hurley, representing Wollaston, who turned in an 85, thereby establishing himself as a real contender for the championship, the title which is now held by Arthur A. Hunt of Weston.

After going to the turn in 42, Hurley came up with 7 at the 12th hole, but he wound up with a 43 by playing the last six holes in two over 4s.

Hurley's card:

Out ..... 4 4 4 5 5 5 5 6—42

In ..... 7 3 7 4 5 3 4 5 5—43—85

Four strokes behind Mr. Hurley is Andrew J. Ford, Albermarle who has the lowest reduced score of the day, a 66, due to a 23 handicap. Ford went out in 44 with a seven on the ninth and, although he started home with another seven, he was 45 for the inward nine.

Ford's card:

Out ..... 4 5 6 6 4 5 5 3 7—44

In ..... 7 3 5 4 5 5 6 5 5—43—89

In the veterans' class, Class AA, 75 years and over, L. B. Folsom carded a 96 for nine holes, while A. H. Beal, Woodland, was the low net with a 51—18—33.

George Wright, who is 87 years of age, turned in a 55, which included 8s at the second and eighth hole.

ANNUAL CANOE MARATHON SUNDAY

By Walter Kiley

June 17 may be Bunker Hill Day in the regions bordering Charlestown, but out on the far reaches of the Charles River it is canoe marathon day, the big event of the year for the able paddlers who make the annual Samoset 26-mile event one of the most colorful spectacles of the early summer season.

All the old favorites and many new ones, ranging in age from 58-year-old Archie Mosher, father of Jerry, three-time champion, down to aspiring youngsters in their early twenties, should make Sunday's race the best of recent years.

Among the stars who have proved their class in the past over the long reaches of the sometimes placid, sometimes turbulent waters are the aforementioned Jerry Mosher of Crescent Canoe Club; his teammate Howard Chapin, and Sonny Bingham of Samoset, the latter two having led the large pack on two occasions.

Then there is Leo Volk, who was second in 1928, Joe Zaboy, second in 1932, both from Samoset; and Ted Blackman from Breeds, runner-up last year, forming a powerful trio, any one of whom would occasion no surprise by breaking into the championship class.

This event boasts two paddlers who have competed in all eight races. They are Bingham and Paul Shannon, both members of Samoset. Bingham has the best record to points over this seven-year period, with a total of 178 out of a possible 175.

George Wright, 84, Star Golfer; Retail Stores Tourney Friday

By Bill Grimes

The annual two-day N. E Senior Golfers' Association championship which is always held at Woodland is one of the most interesting tournaments on the golf calendar. The field has five classes, according to the age of the contestants, and the rivalry for divisional titles is unusually keen.

George Wright, 84-year-old veteran, is playing at Woodland today. He is in Class A, 75 years and over, playing with Dr. Walter G. Kendall. They will play only nine holes but it is a safe bet that George will break 50 also that "Doc" will be in the high 60's.

The Massachusetts open championship is less than a fortnight away. As the entries close shortly it will be to the advantage of pros and amateurs who intend to compete to mail their blanks immediately to the M. G. A. Play will be held at Oyster Harbors, where Francis Ouimet won the title two years ago. The course is in wonderful condition, and there should be some low scoring.

Donald Brian, the actor, is summering at Hingham and has joined the South Shore Country Club. He is a fine golfer and will participate in a number of open tournaments.

Emory P. Bratton, Sandy Burr, and C. Russell Todd, Wollaston, are brushing up their games in preparation for the Lou Little and their Lake Sunapee C. C. football invitation title. The Lake Sunapee invitation is New England's most popular four-ball tourney and bids are at a premium.

Instead of becoming discouraged over her failure to come through during the W. G. A. championship at Winchester, Deborah Verry, Worcester, is all the more determined to master the Royal and Ancient pastime. Miss Verry has been receiving instructions from Burt Nicoll, professional at Belmont Springs, and will be nationally famous within a few years.

The Retail Store Trade Board will gather at the South Shore Country Club Friday for its annual tournament. B. G "Bunnie" Hawkins, James H. Fairclough, Jr., and Lawrence S. Bitner will be in charge of the affair, which promises to attract the largest field in years.

Riverside Golf Club will stage its first M. G. A. tournament tomorrow. It will be a two-day affair and the field will be divided into three classes. Many of the state's leading golfers will play, including Jesse Guilford, Freddie Wright, Jimmy Dolan, Emory Stratton and R. W. "Bunny" Wilson.

Mr. Boston Says:

Fiermonte to Train At Pompton Lakes For Rosenbloom Go

By JACK CONWAY

Pompton Lakes, N. J., June 12—I discovered Enzo Fiermonte, fighter husband of Madeline Force Astor Dick Fiermonte, hidden away at a cottage here. He has quit his society surroundings at Mrs. Astor's estate at Southampton to condition himself for his bout with Maxie Rosenbloom for the light heavyweight championship of the world.

Mr. Boston

A huge Dane dog tipped off the presence of the famous Italian fighter who married into the Astor millions.

The six-year-old daughter of Dr Rier was playing with a huge Dane dog

"You know, of course, he is here.

"I have Enzo hidden away at the cottage of a friend. We prepare his meals and try to make him as happy as possible. As soon as Carnera moves out, Enzo will come into the champion's quarters.

"Mr Fiermonte has been here for several days. He told me he is tired of attending cocktail hours at the Astor estate and wanted to get down to real training. He said he had to come to a camp to do that."

I asked Mrs. Bier if Mrs. Astor would attend her husband's training.

"Enzo told me he didn't believe she would," she answered. "He plans to remain here until after his bout with Rosenbloom. I think Enzo is the finest mannered boxer I ever met. When I enter the dining room, he always stands up. He won't start eating until the rest of the party does.

"He dresses very well, and is so polished. He is so young and very handsome."

Jack Falvey of Stoughton, blessed with a rather practical mind, told Mrs. Bier that Mrs. Astor would prove quite a box office attraction if she would attend the training session.

I was compelled to agree with Mr. Falvey, but I fear boxing fans are not going to see Mrs. Astor at the ringside as her husband prepares for his bout with Rosenbloom.

Broadway Broadsides

With Max Baer acting the role of the playboy and Primo Carnera taking rough medicine, there is no betting on the title bout . . . The champion is quoted an 8 to 5 favorite but I have not seen a single wager made . . . Jack Dempsey thinks Baer is a cinch to win, even though he does not believe Max has done sufficient training . . . Tony Palazola, one of Sharkey's trainers, also likes Baer.

Mike Jacobs is getting $200 a pair for tickets within the first five rows . . . Tickets within the first 20 rows are either sold or in the hands of speculators . . . The $25 price on the tickets is merely the come on . . . Try and get them for that price . . . The lower priced tickets have not been selling well, according to Mike Jacobs.

Lutze Picked to Top Sasha in Arena Go

Nick Lutze will be but a slight favorite to whip Sasha, the pictured Russian, in the main bout of Alex MacLean's wrestling show tomorrow night at the Boston Arena.

Lutze faces one of the roughest, toughest babies he has met in his career, and Nick has taken on plenty of the game's bad men and beaten them.

The bout will be two falls out of three to a positive finish, and the finish may find Lutze the victim of a big upset, for Sasha is regarded as the strongest man in the mat business today and, on top of that, a good wrestler.

TAP'S TIPS

DARTMOUTH IS FAVORED TO RETAIN TITLE

By E. B. Schriftgiesser

Next on the yachting program comes the intercollegiate championships, to be sailed Thursday and Friday, at the Beverly Yacht Club in Marion. Six colleges—Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Princeton, Williams and Cornell—are sending crews to seek college honors under sail.

The races are to be held in the Herreshoff 15 foot centerboard knockabouts, which members of the Beverly Y. C. have lent for the series.

It had been hoped to hold this year's event at Marblehead, but the task of finding six boats whose owners would lend them to the college boys, proved insurmountable.

After some sad experiences with boats lent for the junior championships, North Shore boat owners have become less generous.

Phil Uphold, secretary of the newly formed Harvard Yacht Club, has lots of friends at Marion, where he formerly spent the summer, and managed to dig up a fleet there.

The old Fifteens—some of them have been afloat nearly thirty years—still hold to the gaff rig. To many of the college sailors this ancient type of gear will be unfamiliar, but once they get used to it, they will find the Fifteens a little craft.

Falmouth, which won the collegiate a year ago on Long Island Sound and whose skippers sank Harvard in Boston harbor a few weeks ago, is the favorite. Yale is always a strong contender in the races, and Princeton usually furnishes a crew of experienced sails.

The Boston Yacht Club will hold a house warming and a bean supper at its Marblehead station on Saturday night. The building, damaged by fire last winter, has been largely rebuilt and is in better condition than for some time.

A restaurant is to be kept open at the Marblehead clubhouse this summer for the convenience of members and their guests.

The fleet of the Savin Hill Yacht Club is cruising on a club run to Annisquam this weekend, under the leadership of Commodore Howes Wells. This is the second event in the club's summer program, the most active there in many years.

All the Quincy catboats but one now carry the jib and mainsail rig instead of the old single catboat mainsail. They are also using spinnakers this season.

The changed rig not only makes them faster, but became necessary as the old racing craft no longer could stand the strain of a big mast stepped way up in the bows.

Yankee is on the railway at Newport today, having the bronze bottom burnished to a shine for the first time this summer. Rainbow is at Bristol for the same purpose.

Phils Trade Hurst to Cubs for Camilli

Philadelphia, June 12 (AP)—The Phillies club of the National League has swapped first basemen with the Chicago Cubs, giving Don Hurst in return for Dolph Camilli.

The trade was announced yesterday as a straight player-for-player deal.

The Cubs bought Camilli from Sacramento last year for a reported sum of $25,000. Hurst came to Philadelphia in a deal with St. Louis. Both were hitting .368 in the last averages.

Kerr Named Track Captain at Exeter

Exeter, N. H., June 12 (INS)—Nicholas S. Kerr, of New York City, today was captain of the 1935 Exeter track team.

He was the leading point winner on the team this year, starring in the dashes and the broad jump. Alfred Colwell, of South Hancock, Me., catcher on the Exeter baseball team, will be awarded the Wingate Memorial cup for excellence in baseball. He scored 61 points.

Gill Gets Another Job

Manover, N. H., June 12—Herb Gill, Dartmouth varsity hockey coach, has been named varsity and freshman tennis coach as well.

O'Hara, B. C. High Ace, in Park League Bow With Neponset Nine

By Bob Ahearn

Charlie O'Hara, all-scholastic mound ace at Boston College High, makes his first start in the Boston Park League tonight when Dick Casey's Neponset entry entertains the Charlestown outfit at Garvey Field.

O'Hara should provide a welcome addition to Casey's nine, which is safely entrenched in first place in the Eastern Division. The other contender for Capitol first, Walker second; Sumpian shortstop, and Dick Bassett, who have been going on high for the Neponset club.

After being held to a 7-7 tie last night by George Walker's Roslindale Twi Team, St. Augustines hope to pick up a notch in the standing at the expense of the Madden Club at the Marcella street playgrounds.

Hermitage Club plays host to the Tow Boaters while the Upcos and Raymonds play off a rained out game at Smith Field, Allston. Other games that night saw Jordans beat Charlestown, 8 to 6; Neponset 8, Raymonds 2; Tow Boats 11, Upcos 2.

Tim Ready, Lefty Marso, and Ted Gallihan, regulars on the Boston College varsity nine, which concluded their season by losing to Holy Cross in an extra inning fray, have signed up to play for Jackie Fisher's Bourne entry in the Cape Cod League. Marso and Gallihan are pitchers while Ready excels behind the plate.

Three tilts are carded for the Boston Twi League tonight with the Rosebuds and Lord Tanning game at the latters ground holding the spotlight. Others include Arlington at Hagan Club and Lowell C. M. A. C. at Newton.

Natolli of Newton continues to lead the league in batting according to statistics released today with an average of .500. Next in line are Cote, Red Sox .432; Woodson, C. M. A. C., .414. Gaebe, Waltham, .410; Thibeau, Newton, .405; Lord, C. M. A. C. .400; and P. Concannon, C. M. A. C. .389.

R. H. White Co. nine advanced to second place in the Retail Store League standing when it swamped S. S. Pierce, 17 to 6, at South Boston Stadium. Weiler, playing first base for the winners, homered in the fifth.

CRIMSON, ELI IN 4-MILE DRILL

By International News Service

New London, Conn., June 12—The crack 'varsity of Yale and Harvard continued their practice on the Thames river north of here today in preparation for the annual rowing classic between the Blue and Crimson on Friday, June 22.

The rowing classic this year will probably be witnessed by more persons than ever before in history. President Roosevelt will attend along with a large group of national known personages and their presence in all probability will attract to New London one of the greatest race day crowds in history.

Coach Charley Whiteside put his Crimson oarsmen through a four mile grind yesterday holding them down to a 21 to 22 beat for the first 3½ miles and then stepping it up to 34 for the final half mile. He made no changes in the varsity seating, his present combination having done well to date this season.

Head Coach Ed Leader has shifted his combination of Yale sweep-swingers who yesterday rowed over a three-mile course taking the first 2½ miles with a 22 beat and the last half mile with a 34. Leslie Shaffer of Atlantic City, conswain, replaced Joseph H. Holmes in one of the last workouts last week on the Housatonic and yesterday retained his seat.

WASHINGTON FROSH CREW BREAKS RECORD

By International News Service

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 12—An air of calm settled over the Poughkeepsie regatta camps today following yesterday's series of exciting events.

Washington frosh broke the all-time two-mile record yesterday the Syracuse frosh in a secret race beat the varsity and jayvee boats, Pennsylvania had two drills for the first time and raced the crews on both occasions, Cornell and Columbia had time trials, while Navy, out for her initial spin of the year looked very imposing.

Al Ulbrickson's frosh huskies being picked up by the varsity at the two-mile mark forged ahead to the finish breaking the time of 9 11 finishing two full lengths in front of the varsity boat. The slow time covered a 31 to 25.

The varsity also established the best record of the year with 19 06 for the four miles, which is better time than has been recorded for a most twenty regattas.

FRESHMEN WIN RACE.

While cruising around for news the Seattle (Wash.) scribe and the International News Service correspondent noticed the Syracuse frosh sailing up the river. Sensing that the "Old Man" was up to something, the two commentators boarded a launch and secretly followed the orange oar wielder five miles up the river near President Roosevelt's Hyde Park home.

The pursuit was not fruitless, for when Ten Eyck felt he had privacy he lined up his three boats and raced them for about two miles. The great surprise came when the freshmen finished ahead of the upper-class brothers, leaving the junior varsity way in the rear.

The authenticity of the race was apparent when Coach Ten Eyck raced up to his varsity and appeared to be bawling them out.

Pennsylvania fell into line with a two-a-day as their examinations terminated.

CORNELL PLOWS WELL.

Columbia, under the tuteiage of Huch Glendon and his father, old Dick, put their crews through a time trial. From an exclusive source, the International News Service learned their times was Frosh, 9 27; varsity, 19 56.

Prior to moving bag and baggage to the new M. I. T. house, alongside of California on the east shore, Cornell held some brief time trials over the course, picking up the jayvies at the mile and the frosh at half distance. Their time was understood to have been: Frosh, 9 26 varsity, 19 04.

Base Ball Tips—No. 5

By Austen Lake

FIELDING THE BUNT

Third basemen must keep close watch on the movements of the batter, particularly if there is a man on first base and none out. Good third basemen, like Pinky Whitney of the Braves, can "smell" a bunt, and the moment they see the batter shorten his grip and spraddle out flat-footed, he dashes in. If the batter is a fast man and lays down a good bunt, the third baseman's only chance to catch him is to field the bunt with his bare hand and make the throw in a snappy, underhand flip, without losing time to straighten up.

BAER, CARNERA DECLARED FIT FOR TITLE GO

[illegible] 12 (AP)—Max Baer and Primo Carnera today were given their second physical examination in four days by physicians of the New York State Athletic Commission and reported in perfect physical condition for the 15-round championship fight in Madison Square Garden bowl Thursday night.

No longer ago than last Friday, they were pronounced in excellent condition and fully able to fight 15 rounds for the heavyweight championship. Thursday night, but another thorough once-over by commission physicians was prescribed by Chairman William [illegible] Muldoon, the promoters [illegible] their interests as they sought to offset reports that Baer was out of condition and that Carnera not only was in grave danger of going the route but also was actually ill.

Jimmy Johnston yesterday found something to worry about in developments at Pompton Lakes, where hugs Primo spent the day in bed.

Mystery as thick you could cut with a knife cloaked the champion's whereabouts, his condition of health and everything concerning him for a good part of the day. Finally it became known that he had spent the entire morning, afternoon and evening in bed.

His manager Louis Soresi, said Primo was not one to the edge his way in danger of falling over and was suffering from a slight cold and no trouble. The champion, Soresi asserted was a more shadow at 2.7 pounds and a day in bed had been recommended to bring him up to the normal fighting [illegible] of around 260.

"But I won't make it too plain to you," Soresi added, "that we would not ask for a postponement by all the gold in America. We simply are anxious that Primo shall not be overtrained and called off yesterday's workout for that reason alone.

"We feel the champion plenty of heavy work so he can pick up the weight he will need until fight time.

Blockade of Exports Is Seen Likely by Sir Arthur Salter

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

A rise in the price of [illegible] would [illegible] Chinese ex- [illegible] Sir Arthur Salter [illegible] ing to [illegible] in the [illegible] who has been encouraged to believe that higher silver prices would be a great help to coop- [illegible] trade. This was the opinion of Sir Arthur Salter, as expressed in a special bulletin to be issued by the Economic Forum [illegible] contains a definite warning that silver price increases, instead of [illegible] blocking China, are the means of spreading deflation. China has a vastly greater [illegible] than the [illegible] advised to make [illegible] to this [illegible]

Let's look at the position of China, so that we may understand just how her trade is related to silver. China pays for imports (which include silver) with her exports. She is not particularly interested in giving up silver for what she buys. Rather is silver the measuring rod for Chinese trade. As an importer of silver, higher prices would mean that China would receive a smaller quantity of silver for her exports. In order to remain in a position to import the white metal, it would soon be necessary for China to reduce internal costs in terms of silver, thus inaugurating a silver deflation era.

Notes: In order to grasp the silver problem, remember our tussle with gold. Gold became valuable in terms of commodities . . . Raising the per ounce price of silver would [illegible] come too valuable in China in terms of [illegible] . . . [illegible] dilles . . . Over the last two years China avoided drastic deflation, because [illegible] decrease more in terms of gold than of gold against [illegible] in terms of commodities . . . It is hard to see how [illegible] would [illegible] Chinese [illegible] [illegible] par Co.

The reaction we wrote you Saturday to expect the first of this week is well on the road to completion. The upper edge of the probable support area, 95-97, has been touched and at the present writing there is no reason to suppose that 95 will be violated. The market as a whole is working away from a four week trading zone that has all the earmarks of a strong rally base. Traders who have not availed themselves of previous opportunities to buy likely looking shares might consider doing so on further dips.

Latest [illegible] from a sled just why the steel group is attracting attention. Simply answered it is due to the fact that many industries dependent on steel both as a [illegible] and a source of [illegible] are making [illegible] general [illegible] which [illegible] of the [illegible] directly. For [illegible] [illegible] industries have [illegible] recent [illegible] years. Automotive [illegible] about one quarter of the [illegible] industrial wealth. Building [illegible] a source of real encouragement.

Briefs: Some may answer to the above that steel share prices have been trending lower. That is true but the market for shares inevitably discounts well in advance . . . And the steel shares early in February sold at levels which [illegible] discounted good spring operating ratios . . . To say nothing of steel markets' uncertainties and talk of a steel strike and summer dullness.

STOCK PRICES ARE HIGHER AT CLOSE

New York, June 12—Stocks were generally higher at the close today despite restricted trading volumes.

Stock performed to the satisfaction of recovery proponents although brokerage houses still bemoaned the slackness of business. Some nervousness continued in evidence as the steel labor controversy appeared to be without any immediate solution.

Grains resumed their upward advance after early hesitancy. Corn led the agricultural gain, rising more than 2 cents a bushel. But wheat, rye and oats were up around a cent. Breaking of the drought was offset by indications that serious damage has already been done to the growing cereals.

Cotton prices either did better and silver was about steady. Bonds were quiet and moderately higher. The dollar advanced against sterling, foreign exchanges. Renewed weakness was shown by the German mark.

Buying in American Telephone was attributed partly to reports from Washington that the proposed Congressional investigation of this utility might be abandoned for 30 days. Some of the metal group apparently responded to the Senate's passage of the silver bill.

Wall Street was inclined to feel that, even if presidential intervention fails to halt the proposed steel workers' walkout, the mills may not be forced to close down. He was generally hopeful that most of the companies have been making careful preparations to meet a strike with the view of maintaining operations.

Stocks were irregular and trading was extremely dull in the first hour. Steel shares were particularly soft with U. S. Steel dropping more than a point. Normally Mines was also a major fraction from its last closing price.

Sugar stock firmed with Great Western Sugar advancing more than a point. Reynolds Tobacco B was down a major fraction. May Department Stores was down around a point.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 310,000 shares.

The market moved forward during the second hour accompanied by an increase in volume. Motors recovered and moved ahead a point net while numerous other shares showed similar gains. U. S. Smelting got up 2 points by noon.

United Carbon was around a point higher. Diamond Match lowered around a point.

Manhattan Transit was fractionally above its last closing price. Evans Products advanced more than a point. American Commercial Alcohol eased.

Sales to noon approximated 660,000 shares.

Stocks turned upward in the third hour with a noticeable pickup in volume. U. S. Steel were about the only stock that did not participate in the rise although it regained all of an early loss and moved over a point. Spiegel May Stern was more than 3 points higher. Air Reduction, 12—Pont and Ingersol, Rand were 2 or more points higher.

Sales to 2 p. m. approximated 500,000 shares.

Gains of a point or more appeared in Allied Chemical, American Commercial Alcohol, American Smelting, American Telephone, Athlson, Bohn Aluminum, U. S. Smelting, Union Carbide, United Carbon and Wright Aero.

Sales to 2 p. m. approximated 810,000 shares.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

By LIEUTENANT L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

Whoopee, Junior Birdmen! From national headquarters comes a message that will be of tremendous interest to you. Lawrence Shaw, national director, reports that flight squadron requirements have been reduced from 20 members to eight members.

This means that you will find it much easier now to become a squadron commander or captain and wear the bars that go with those offices.

The change in this rule is the result of many letters which have been received at national and wing headquarters from Junior Birdmen and Junior Birdwomen stating that the writers would like to organize a flight squadron, but that they just couldn't get as many as 20 members.

John Burwell

So we are now reducing the number to a total of eight. You will surely find it easy to get seven other girls and boys in your neighborhood to join you in forming your own flight squadron. They can be signed up from among your friends in the community in which you live or the school or church you attend.

Organize Your Own Unit of Eight Now

Of course we already have many local Junior Birdmen flight squadrons that were organized under the old ruling, with 20 charter members to begin with. However, the new lesser requirements should encourage more of you boys and girls to band yourselves together and build a flight squadron. Send for your official charter, officers' bars and the book of rules governing the activities and meetings of flight squadrons at once!

All you have to do now, to form a unit of your own, is send me the names of seven Junior Birdmen members in addition to yourself together with their membership numbers, enclosing five cents for registration fee. If you can't find seven members in your neighborhood or school, get seven boys and girls to join and then form your own flight squadron. You will have loads of fun conducting your own weekly meetings, model contests and other unit activities as outlined in the flight squadron booklet which will be sent you with your charter and the official officers' bars for your commander and captain.

Don't delay. Organize your unit before the summer vacation starts in. It will give you plenty of activity during the warm summer months, holding your meetings outdoors and enjoying your flight squadron activities in addition to those given you by the wing and national headquarters.

Every member, when receiving his or her membership material, will find a leaflet enclosed describing more fully just how to organize a Junior Birdmen flight squadron, with or without a sponsor to guide you in your work. Follow these details carefully, when applying for a charter, but remember the new change in rules—YOU NEED BUT SEVEN MEMBERS TO FORM A UNIT OF YOUR OWN!

Flight Commanders' Letters Wanted

All flight commanders are urged to send in letters or call at wing headquarters, 100 Summer st, and report on the activities of their squadrons in order that we may print the news. They are also asked to send in clear, sharp snapshots or photographs of their officers.

The up and doing commander of Flight Squadron No. 4 is John Burwell, 18, of 7 Rosewood st., Malden. This squadron calls itself the Louis F. Ross Squadron, an honor which is hereby acknowledged. Commander Burwell now has 23 members and expects soon to have a membership of 30. This squadron has an oath of allegiance, a secret handshake and a password and is planning a banquet, a photograph contest and other activities.

They meet Saturday mornings at the K. of C. hall in Mattapan. Burwell was active at the air festival taking photographs of the participants, including "Teddy" Kenyon and Clint Edson. Herbert Burwell is the captain.

Another enthusiastic Junior Birdman is Malcolm Hanson, 11, of 112 Adams st., Dorchester.

RADIO HOUR OF "RIO RITA," MUSICAL HIT, FEATURES AIR WAVES

Lively Ziegfeld Success on Broadcast

By N. F. T.

Into the pile of past performances, musical and dramatic, the microphone moguls continue to delve for material with which to fill the air. Now those who recall and perhaps relished the Ziegfeld extravaganza called "Rio Rita" written by Fred Thompson and Guy Bolton some years ago, can catch it again in sound, wafted as an air attraction (WEEI, from 10 through to 11 o'clock tonight.

Gladys Swarthout, James Melton and John Barclay will be the starring "Rio Rita" singers by request

during the above sixty minute setting. The plot centers around Mexican revolutionary stirring fictional Texas Ranger characters and bold, bad bandits. It has been called the most elaborate Ziegfeld musical ever produced and as a footran for 500 consecutive performances on Broadway, then carried over from doing's by two or three road companies.

Likewise it furnished a tuneful motion picture theme for Hollywood folks to feature, which they did at considerable cost.

BUSY BUSINESS

Keeping the air lanes vibrant with free doings is becoming one of the big problems confronting broadcasting bosses. It was Fred Allen the comedian who made a remark the other day to the effect that he has used as much if not more material for his gags turns in six months or so than he might need in 15 years on the stage—imagine!

* * *

Walter Smith, outstanding among cornet soloists in the United States, steps into a Yankee Network spot (WNAC) for start of a series this evening, accompanied by Harry E. Rodgers at the console. Walter can be heard between 7.30 and 7.45 p. m.

EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill . . . Newspaperman first . . . Radio news commentator afterward . . . For Ed Hill's first love is the city room . . . where he is the well-dressed newspaperman . . . As well as a leading newshound.

For nearly a quarter century although Ed's appearance doesn't indicate it . . . He has been covering outstanding murder trials in New York . . . Major disasters in the nation . . . Political concentions . . . Personalities . . . And all the rest . . . His field includes Europe, Central America, South America . . . As well as the Orient.

Ed's not a golf fan . . . Who were both mid-western teachers . . . Pointed Ed for a schoolmaster's post . . . But he smelt of ink was too strong . . . So strong that he smelled an Indianapolis job . . . All the way from Auburn, Ind., his birthplace of 4000 souls.

He had gone through Auburn High School . . . Not a prodigious feat . . . And the University of Indiana . . . A bit more difficult . . . Majoring in English . . . Then barging into newspaper work . . . Without introductions or credentials.

New York called eventually . . . But on the way to Manhattan he served other editors . . . In Fort Wayne and Cincinnati . . . Landing in Manhattan, however, still without introductions . . . Although their lack fetased him not a bit . . . For he made friends easily . . . And still does.

Most distinguished appearing of Manhattan reporters . . . But his golf score is far from distinguished . . . And is never under the high nineties . . . Yet he makes golf one of his hobbies . . . Along with horseback riding . . . And a bit terrier . . . And his iron gray hair . . . And his wife . . . The former Jane Gail . . . once a noted screen actress.

Try Your Hand at Imps

Odd Numbers in Corners, Center; Evens at Edges

Answer to yesterday's problem: A, impossible; B, Possible.

One week of the Imps in Boston today and the puzzling days have been taken by thousands into the bosoms of Greater Bostonians.

The Imps are still under thousands to be given out free by the Boston Evening American, therefore if you haven't got your Imp or you should risk your peace of mind and get yours before it is too late.

Imp is a game more fascinating than cross-word puzzles when they were the rage—and the Boston Evening American with one hand held up to ward off blows, offers you the Imps free.

All you need do to get one of these diabolical things is ask your newsboy or your newsdealer. If he hasn't one at the time merely send a self-addressed and stamped envelope to the Chief imp, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston, and one will be mailed to you.

Or, if you wish, you may call at the Circulation Department of the Boston Evening America with your address—and you will be given an Imp free.

The Imps in this free distribution by the Evening American are card board puzzles, but if you wish one in colored metal, with the numbers fixed into the puzzle on a sliding device, they are on sale in various department and other stores in Greater Boston.

36,000 Teachers Praise Hearst School Stand

By Universal Service

New York, June 12—High praise for the editorial stand taken by the Hearst publications in behalf of public education was voiced today by William R. Lasher, chairman of the joint committee of teachers' organizations, representing 77 teachers associations with 36,000 members.

Referring to an editorial in the New York American of June 7, under the caption, "This Nation Demands Fewer Politicians and More and Better Schools," Lasher said:

"It was a stirring appeal to the intelligence and patriotism of our people who, while inherently loyal to American ideals and institutions, are growing forgetful of the long established truth that free public education is the one important guard of our national life—the only stable foundation for hope and faith in our national future.

"Economy in governmental expenditures, against which our taxburdened citizens are now justly complaining, is not only desirable but pressingly essential, but economy in the education of its children is, as has been wisely said, the most reckless extravagance the State can commit.'

"This committee extends its thanks to Mr. William Randolph Hearst for this splendid championship of free and full educational opportunity for the youth of our country, an opportunity now gravely menaced."

Lasher expressed hope that "your editorial campaign will pave the way to a universal awakening of the American people to their imperative duty in the grave situation now confronting schools throughout the nation."

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

TUESDAY, JUNE 12, 1934

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

Our Railroad Problem; Who Can Solve It?

ONE of the long publicized dreams of numerous New England leaders has been the merging of the steam railroads of this section into a single line.

Arguments for and against such action are very numerous, but the proponents of the merger idea are especially active again right now on Beacon Hill.

President John J. Pelley of the New Haven is reported opposed to a general merger.

The northern New England railroad leaders do not want to come into a combination, because they have been, and are, doing remarkably well "on their own."

Hundreds of New Englanders are investors in our railroads at the present time. Thousands of New Englanders are employed by the carriers. All these want their interests protected if there is to be a "New Deal."

The proponents of the railroad merger plan say New England capital would be strongly attracted to securities of the "All New England" railroad.

This would be true after it had established itself on a proven investment basis, but not before. New England capital has always sought sound investment. It always will.

ONE difficulty in the way of the plan arises from the position of the Boston & Albany, which is under lease to the New York Central until 1999. In the interim, security holders of the Boston & Albany have pleasant financial guarantees from the New York Central that would make them reluctant to seek a change.

Getting control of the voting stock of New England railroads as they are offers a big hurdle for consolidation backers to surmount. An attempt to buy a sufficient number of shares to win control, either privately or in the open market, would surely have the effect of bidding up the price of shares.

The desirability of New England's controlling its own carriers can hardly be questioned. How it can do so beyond the present amount of control exercised by State commissions is a deep problem.

The old saying that "Rome wasn't built in a day" must apply forcefully to the proposed merger of our New England steam carriers.

New Englanders with constructive ideas on the subject should make them known.

Lesson of the Killing

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Morgan T. Ryan hits straight from the shoulder when he denounces the Charlestown "Loop" speeders as "young hoodlums."

Registrar Ryan, interpreting the lesson of the "Loop" killings, calls for support of Governor Ely's plan to stiffen the penalties for those who take automobiles without permission.

The law currently does not consider these thieves guilty of a felony until they attempt to sell all or some part of the car they have taken. Legally, they merely "misappropriate" your automobile. If they took your pocketbook in the same way, there would be no such word juggling about the matter but a whole lot more common sense.

Governor Ely, Registrar Ryan and many other reputable citizens would have the maximum penalty for automobile stealing extended to ten years in State Prison.

This would leave our judges free to deal with offenders in a way that would instill more respect for law and order than prevails today.

Gardens for Needy

Complaint comes from the large town of Weymouth that, although welfare recipients have been offered free gardens to raise vegetables, no applications for the gardens have been received.

Alvah M. Thompson was the big-hearted individual who offered free use of 50 North Weymouth acres for the needy. Along with the free gardens go ploughing, seeds, cultivating tools and fertilizer.

The offer recalls World War days when free gardening lots were assigned in Franklin Park. Hundreds then took advantage of the chance to become "city farmers."

At the Weymouth selectmen's offices it is stated that about 300 families, including approximately 2000 persons, are welfare recipients in the town today.

Intimation is made that there may be a change in welfare procedure. One selectman says welfare receivers may be assigned free garden lots and told they must cultivate them or lose out on welfare assistance.

Cords and Safety

E. L. Cord, American banker, automobile and aviation magnate, seeks safety from kidnapers by going with his family to England. On the surface, Mr. Cord's distrust of the ability of American police to cope 100 per cent successfully with kidnapers appears not without some grounds. Certainly he displays a warranted confidence in the power of the law overseas.

Yet it is quite likely that, if instead of seeking a haven in Surrey, England, the Cords had gone instead, for example, to the New Hampshire town of the same name, the Cord family would have been as safe. Criminals operate most successfully in large centers, where, like rats, they can flee quickly to their hiding places.

In the open New England countryside, patrolled by well-co-ordinated state police, crime is kept mostly on a non-profitable basis.

Public in Spy Role

Appeal from members of the Boston Board of Overseers of Public Welfare calls on every resident of Boston to protect the city against fraud. The people are asked to report "unworthy" recipients of the dole.

A known fact is that in the past people who have reported cases they deemed "unworthy" have seen complaints followed by inaction. You have to be very public-spirited indeed to accept the role of spying on your neighbor. After all, we pay public officials to carry on this work.

Listen, World!

-:- By Elsie Robinson

WHY DOES LIFE GO INTO A TAIL-SPIN?

Just another broken home. Such a common story that you'd hardly notice it if you saw it in print. Yet, if it happened to YOU, you'd be as surprised, shocked and stunned as this poor wife is today.

Elsie Robinson

How could he do it, after all those happy years of married life? Such a quiet, steady man! So good to her and the children! Those terrible things they heard about other husbands and wives—they couldn't possibly happen to THEM! Then suddenly, hideously, out of a clear sky, it DID happen. The wife came home from a long siege at the hospital to find—

But you can fill in the rest for yourself. The furtive week-end trips when she'd supposed he was "away on business." The nights at the office. The whole heart-breakingly familiar sordid affair.

WHY DD HE DO IT?

What do I "think of them all—of her, her husband, and the other woman"?

As to that, I have no answer. What can I think, not knowing any of them? But I do know a bit about life and marriage—and human beings. And perhaps that will help.

Regardless of who you are, or what you're up against, you can always bet on this one fact:

NEITHER LIFE, NOR MARRIAGE, NOR YOU, NOR THE OTHER FELLOW IS EVER GOING TO TURN OUT ACCORDING TO SPECIFICATIONS.

We're told so many pretty fairy tales... we're taught so many delightful theories...and we invent, for ourselves, so many cockeyed notions...about what life and people ought to be.

BUT THE REALITY NEVER FITS ANY OF THEM!

Neither marriage nor life nor folks turn out as we think they will, or should.

NOR DO WE OURSELVES TURN OUT AS WE PLANNED WE WOULD!

We go along for years, leading exemplary lives, holding the finest principles, feeling the purest motives. Never once do we consciously desire to harm or fail anyone—to do anything shameful, reckless or unkind.

AND THEN SUDDENLY, FROM SOME SECRET DARKNESS WITHIN US, SPRINGS A STRANGE SELF WHOSE EXISTENCE WE HAVE NEVER SUSPECTED — AND SWEEPS OUR NORMAL PROGRAM ASIDE, AND WRECKS OUR LIVES.

That isn't true of just some miserable isolated spirit. To a greater or less degree, it's true of all of us.

WE ALL HAVE DOUBLE NATURES. WE ALL ARE DR. JEKYLLS AND MR. HYDES.

How do we get that way? Does Fate will it?

No—we get that way because we want to get that way . . . through our own decisions!

But surely we don't deliberately decide to become a cruel and shameless scoundrels, breaking the hearts of those who love us most, dragging our own names in the gutter!

No, we don't deliberately choose any such tragic career. But each day, each hour, we make seemingly trivial decisions to do the weak or the wrong things . . . petty indulgences of our laziness, greediness, vanity, cowardice or restlessness . . . secret evasions and excuses which never even come into open action.

We think those small, forgotten acts "don't count." But they do. They are the warp and woof of our behavior. They are the things which determine our character.

FOR SUDDENLY, SOME DAY, WE ARE CONFRONTED WITH A GREAT TEMPTATION AND OUR NATURES, WEAKENED BY THOSE SMALL, FORGOTTEN SURRENDERS, CANNOT STAND THE PRESSURE.

Why do we do the terrible things we sometimes do? What's why.

And how should we treat those who hurt and fail us in such ghastly "tail spins"?

HOW WOULD WE WISH TO BE TREATED OURSELVES?

We ALL are Dr. Jekylls and Mr. Hydes. We ALL "have done those things which we ought not to have done."

Perhaps YOU haven't come to YOUR day of reckoning yet. But when and if you do—

WHAT WOULD YOU WANT THE OTHER FELLOW TO DO TO YOU?

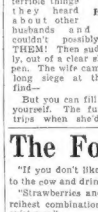
"If you don't like spinach feed it to the cow and drink the milk.

"Strawberries and cream are the richest combination of vitamins in existence."

Take these golden words and frame them and hang them on the dining room wall, friends of my heart, and never, never let any faddist threaten you with diet-ills if you don't happen to like the food he thinks you ought to like, just because he likes it.



Winifred Black

I'm glad the good Boss likes spinach I don't, and you couldn't hire me to eat it, not with the whole wealth of the Indies.

No, not even if the most suave baboo frmo the land of gold and nouga and cinnamon and lemonade should stand at my door with a king's ransom in his turban and begged me on his bended knees.

And breakfast food—how many hours a week did your poor mother spend trying to make you pretend to like a certain variety which the food faddists happened to be recommending at that special time?

And what a wild thrill of delight it gave you to hear just the other day that the new doctors will not let one of their patients even taste the smallest teaspoon of that particular food, which has so rapidly gone out of fashion?

The first thing we know some good kin dscientist will arise and tell us that nothing on earth is so good for the health as mince pie, piping hot, served with a rich cheese, and plenty of both.

Doctors and scientists are getting to be more obliging every day.

Why, they even recommend fresh air and lots of it, plenty of sleep and no letting yourself be irritated by going to parties where you will meet irritating people.

And it will not surprise me in the least to have some hearty well-wisher to the human race announce in trumpet tones that in his opinion poor old Happy Go Lucky was not only a good-natured soul but a wise man of great discernment.

What was it that was the burden of good Happy Go Lucky's Song?

"Sure I eat when I'm hungry, I drink when I'm dry, I'm Happy Go Lucky, says I."

Come on, Brother, you in the skull cap with the long, pale, wistful face of the dyapeptic and the food faddist, let's go out in Lucky was not only a good-Duty-Diet and I.

Let's have baked ham, with slices of pineapple baked under the jacket, candied sweet potatoes, mashed white potatoes, chicken giblets with mushrooms, mince pie, pumpkin pie, chocolate layer cake, and big, old-fashioned jelly cake with six layers and frosting on top, a strawberry shortcake with thick cream and it served fresh from the oven.

And when the table groans with delight and the mushroom gravy is hot in the gravy dish, let's throw all these things into the garbage and dine on a thin little crisp and a glass of grapefruit juice, and be hygienic and sensible and perfectly miserable together.

So shall we cheat the hospitals and make a mortal enemy of the undertakers' protective association.

Do I hear faint moans of anguish from the back part of the hall?

Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

LIGHT AS SUMMER LOVE

It scarcely seems worth the effort to study the yoyo way in a man's affections, now that the traffic is so congested and the parking time is so short.

When a woman starts to chain a man to her side, he soon begins to look around for a blonde to use as a file, so that he can do a Dillinger.

If you are going in for the Man West curves, you can eat your cake and have "IT," too. But, however popular the padding, nudism will never have much appeal for the woman who weighs over 190 pounds.

Helen Rowland

The only "technique" which any girl needs in the love-game is to know how to be amiable, lovable and mildly responsive—and, at the same time, to keep her heart always at a slightly lower temperature than the man's.

Many a girl goes into marriage with a trousseau made up of frills and dancing frocks, only to discover, after the honeymoon, that she will probably spend three-quarters of her life in kitchen bungalow aprons.

When a man takes a girl out, it is usually in order to give his brain a complete rest—which is probably why he always chooses a woman who knows how to make him laugh and dodges a girl who makes him THINK.

As long as failing in love is just a matter of mood with a man, marriage will continue to be just a matter of chance, a wife just a matter of luck and divorce just a matter of time.

It has been predicted by Voliva that the devil will take over the world somewhere around Labor Day. But up to that time, no doubt, Beelzebub figures that he can lolll back and take it easy, knowing that the politicians, the beach sirens and the summer widows will carry on his work and finish whatever the racketeers may overlook.

Clothes do not make the woman—but that's not what she buys them for, says Rene Ruth. She buys them to make the men.

Senators Owe It to People to State League Stand

By James T. Williams, Jr.

One third of the membership of the United States Senate will be elected this year. Every candidate for the Senate owes it to his constituents to tell them whether he is for or against entering the League of Nations, either by the front door of the League covenant or the back door of the League Court.

Ratification of the League Court protocols which are now before the committee on foreign relations would take the United States into the League through the back door entrance to that entangling political alliance.

Consideration of these intricate engagements has been postponed until the Senate reconvenes next January. Final action on these proposed treaties may well be the most important action of the next Congress.

ESCAPE NOT POSSIBLE

Some people seem to think that the United States under these protocols could go in the Court and then leave it whenever a question came up which this country thought ought not to be tried by the court. That theory is exploded in the able brief filed with the committee recently by no less eminent jurisdict and diplomatist than our former Ambassador to Mexico, Hon. Reuben Clark, Jr. In the light of his argument no candidate for the Senate can logically contend that this country can escape the jurisdiction of the League by becoming a member of its Court. Take for example the obligations under Article 13 of the League Covenant.

Members of the League agree in this article "to carry out in good faith any award that may be rendered and not to resort to war against a member of the League which complies therewith."

It is also provided in this same article that in case of failure to carry out an award, "the Council shall propose what steps should be taken to give effect thereto." Ambassador Clark calls attention to the fact that this jurisdiction of the League may well extend to all members of the League Court.

Many advocates of American entry into the League Court insist that this country would always carry out any award of the Court made against us. Can we be sure of that? Ambassador Clark, in his brief, cites an improbable case, as he says, but one involving legal principles that might also be involved in cases which might easily arise.

"Assume that Great Britain," says Mr. Clark, "which has no port in the Pacific but desires to secure one, and assume that she proposed to Mexico the exchange of British Honduras for Lower California. Assume further that Mexico accepts. Unless we abandoned the nation's old policies, we should not be willing to allow this exchange to be made. But there is no apparent principle of international law which would be violated by such a transfer.

TWO COURSES OPEN

"Such a situation would leave two courses open to us.

"Either fight to keep Britain out of possession or adjust the matter by peaceful means.

"If we threaten war, Britain could either fight or invoke the provisions of Article 13 or Article 17 of the Covenant. If we did not wish to fight, we could invoke Article 13 on the basis that by signing the League Court protocol and adopting the Court statute we had rendered ourselves amenable to this arbitrable provision of the League Covenant as we admit we have done to the advisory opinion provision of Article 14.

"If we went to arbitration it is difficult to see how we could be able to win our cause if the Court acted as a judicial body, for there is no international law prohibiting nations from exchanging territory. If we went to the council it is difficult to see how that body could declare that two nations might not do that which international law, custom and precedent said they could do, merely because a third power, which was only indirectly and potentially affected did not wish them to do it. In this view the council would make an award against us."

What would happen then? Is there any candidate for the Senate this year, Democrat or Republican, who thinks the United States would not regard a British, Japanese or other foreign naval base at Magdalena Bay as such a threat to our national security and safety "as not to be tolerated and so undertake to prevent by force" any foreign power from occupying that territory in spite of the award made against us by the League?

JUST ONE OF POSSIBILITIES

Of course, if we went to war under such circumstances we should be subject to the sanctions provided by the League Covenant for such a situation.

This is only one of the possible cases, cited in Mr. Clark's brief, which might arise if this country enters the League Court. Every candidate for the Senate should read this brief before presuming to discuss the question of ratifying these protocols. Every candidate for the Senate should tell the people where he stands upon the question of ratification before election day.

Human Side of the News; the Creed of Japan

By Edwin C. Hill

"Remember that death is lighter than a feather, but duty is heavier than a mountain." Fifteen words written in Japanese script on a huge gold screen above the portrait of the great Emperor Meiji in every regimental headquarters of the Imperial Japanese army.

And that injunction is the creed, not only of every Japanese soldier who walks or rides or flies, but is the creed that is implanted in the mind of every Japanese child from the cradle.

It goes a long way to explain why little Japan, in the short space of 35 years, has been able, with her population of 60,000,000, to dominate vast Asia, with the exception of Siberia and India.

It is the perfect explanation of why a few thousand Japanese troops have been able to rip a whole vast province out of disorganized, faithless China and to batter their way through the Great Wall and threaten Peiping and all North China.

REASON FOR LIVING

The Japanese soldier is taught that the reason he was given life is to die on the battlefield for the Emperor, if the Emperor commands. Japan is strong and self-reliant and fearless because they recognize the will and authority of only one human being on earth, their Emperor.

From childhood through life, the Japanese is taught and believed that every good act is an act of loyalty to the Emperor, and every bad act an act of disloyalty.

The farmer is taught that every sunny day reveals the graciousness of the Emperor, who has willed that the sun should give its warmth and light. The Japanese policeman curbs an unruly crowd with maxims from the imperial prescripts.

The officers of the army bring tears to the eyes of the officers against discipline when they read passages from the Emperor's commands.

From the day that a Japanese soldier enters the service of his country, he is taught the Seven Duties, among which are loyalty, valor, patriotism, humility, morality and honor. And with these, the glory and ease of death for the sake of the Emperor. No nation, since Rome crushed Carthage, has been so disciplined as the Japanese people. And that is why the undisciplined hordes of China have gone down before the Japanese invasion like falling ripe.

The Japanese soldier is forbidden everything which tends toward frivolity or luxury or extravagance. His life is as stern and hard and as devoted as the life of those iron-hearted Spartans of Lacedemonia who went forth to battle with the injunction: "Return with your shield or upon it."

His pay is one dollar and forty-five cents a month, and he must not spend more than half of this on amusement. He must not receive money, food, clothing or sweetmeats from home. He is not supposed to carry more than three cigarettes or one match at a time.

These are the men and the disciplins that have defied the League of Nations, the League which appointed the United States to pull its irons out of the fire.

Russia plays a close and curious game with Japan over the great chessboard of Asia. Two months ago only, there was more than a prospect of war between the two powers that have bitten deeply into the old Chinese Empire.

And that possibility has by no means disappeared. But guided by the cunning of a one-time London travelling salesman, Russia has refrained so far from knocking the chip off a shoulder impudently thrust forward by the Mikado.

The Bear bides his time, unquestionably, in the hope that advice of this same Litvinoff, recently a guest at the White House, where he spent an hour in the bedlam with President Roosevelt, hinted of millions in Russian trade and generally was a smart piece of diplomatic work.

The world knows the erstwhile travelling salesman, Mr. Harrison, by his real name, which is Maxim Litvinoff, Commissar of Foreign Affairs for the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Whether the new deal between Russia and Japan is merely to spite the League of Nations, and incidentally, the United States, or whether it is based upon deeper motives, does not appear on the surface. But Maxim Litvinoff is the closest thing to Machiavelli that modern diplomacy has produced.

Portly, fifty-six year old Litvinoff, with his shrewd eyes behind gold-rimmed glasses and his bland smile is no amateur in the confidence game of European politics.

He comes of a middle-class family, but went Red early in his career, when the Czar was on the throne. He had to get out of Russia in haste. He went to England and spent many years there, placing his Tartar personality with polished British mannerisms.

His wife British goods under the name of Harrison and married an Englishwoman, Miss Ivy Low, of a highly conservative journalistic family.

English is the language of their home in Moscow. Even the servants must speak it, and there is an English tutor for the little Litvinoffs. But for all his English overlay, and his gold-plate state dinners, Litvinoff remains a strong Communist as he moves about Europe playing Stalin's game.

Stars and Stripes

Since the governor of Indiana declares there will be no dickering with Dillinger, let the dillying and dallying continue.

Some steel union leaders claim to have the strike situation well tied-ed up.

Urging the President to make Congress do something, if "it takes all summer," is some people's idea of how to make the punishment fit the crime.

A celebrated economist says Americans have found 700 ways to kill time, but good old-fashioned loafing is still the best way.

More than a million Americans are still waiting to be officially notified that they didn't win the Derby sweepstakes.
